

Grady Hospital Pay Ward Voted By City Council

Fulton County Representatives Will Ask Necessary Charter Amendment by General Assembly.

SPECIAL TAX WORKERS ENGAGED BY COUNCIL

Permanent Registration Approved—Annexation Plan Killed—Tax on Prize Fights Is Voted.

Employment of a special tax investigator in the war on tax evasion, appropriation of the money necessary for immediate start on Broad street and Edgewood avenue re-zoning, and concurrence in the charter revision committee recommendations for a pay ward at Grady hospital, permanent registration of voters, and authority to levy a five per cent gross receipt tax on prize fights were voted by general council at its adjourned session Thursday and sent to Mayor Walter A. Sims for final approval.

Levying of a straight 5 per cent tax on prize fights would serve to remove limitations previously in force. The former prize tax method provided a 5 per cent levy on gross receipts up to $300 and the new ordinance is intended to remove the $300 limitation. This change must be authorized by the general assembly.

The McLendon-Russell proposal for annexing the Buckhead and Druid Hills territory was killed as was the Buchanan proposal to give mayor and council authority to abolish or consolidate city department heads.

Parker Is Engaged.
H. E. Parker, former federal revenue agent, is to begin round up of intangible property immediately on signature of the ordinance by Mayor Sims and will receive 10 per cent of all the money collected as payment for his work.

The Broad street and Edgewood avenue money had been appropriated for use by the city at the county commission meeting Wednesday and was reappropriated to the street purposes without routine delay in order that the downtown paving may be completed before fall.

The expected fight to kill the Grady hospital pay ward plan did not develop, and unless Mayor Sims disapproves the resolution, Fulton's representatives in the general assembly will introduce a charter amendment opening the way for construction of a new ward during the fall. The other charter amendment proposals also will go to the Fulton delegation with the city's request that they be introduced.

Inman Ordinance Referred.
An attempt by Councilman Edward H. Inman to have council vote an ordinance revoking taxi and jitney drivers' licenses if their holders are convicted of speeding, reckless driving or driving while intoxicated plunged council into a spirited debate which ended in the paper being referred to the ordinance committee for study.

The Inman ordinance specified automatic revocation of taxi or jitney permits for a period of six months on first offense and permanently on second offense. After council had voted 19 to 9 against referring it to the ordinance committee, Alderman W. B. Hartsfield introduced an amendment specifying 30 days suspension of permit on first offense, 90 days on second offense and permanent suspension on third offense. The ordinance and amendment were referred to the committee.

Dry Declaration Will Cost G.O.P. 11 States, Butler

President of Columbia University Demands Wet Plank in Platform.

New York, May 8.—Declaring that the republican party will lose eleven important states in the coming presidential election if it does not make a declaration on the wet and dry issue, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, today came out squarely for the adoption of an anti-prohibition plank in the republican 1924 platform.

"The only way to get back to sound constitutional government is to root out the chief causes of the existing lawlessness," Dr. Butler said. "This can be accomplished only by a declaration on prohibition in the national platform."

The university head declared that the republican party stood in danger of losing Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Wisconsin, Illinois and Missouri if the issue were ignored.

"My attention is called to the danger to the party if it fails to satisfy public opinion or if it allows itself to be allied even in appearance with the activities of the Anti-Saloon league."

FRENZIED ROARS ROCK COURTROOM IN TRIAL OF REDS

Threats of Death Leap From Cage to Cage as Italian Rioters Scorn "State's Evidence" Men.

JURORS USE BOOKS TO IDENTIFY ACCUSED

138 Defendants Are Charged With Murder and Pillage of Nine Carabiniers.

BY FRANCISCO REA.

Rome, May 8.—From behind the bars of a huge iron cage in a Florence courtroom, a frenzied mob of anarchist and communist prisoners screamed, shouted and hurled threats across the room Thursday at a group of their fellows confined in a smaller cage.

One hundred and thirty-five men and three women, were on trial for murders and violence during the red riots in northern Italy in 1921.

The entire group had been herded like animals into the larger cage when the trial opened. They had sat there, some boldly, some uneasily, under the guns of 200 carabinieri who guarded the court.

Grows Greet Order.

Then suddenly the judge ordered that certain men be taken from the cage. Growling like beasts, the designated men were led out, taken through the court, and placed in the small prisoner's cage used in ordinary trials.

Tumult swept the courtroom. The members of the smaller group were turning state's evidence, confessing their crimes, betraying their fellows.

Growls from the huge cage rose to shouts, angry denunciations, threats that those who betrayed would die. Across the room the groups eyed each other with cries of blood feud and vengeance.

Each Seat Numbered.

The incident marked the opening of one of the most extraordinary trials of modern times. The 138 defendants are charged with deliberately murdering and robbing nine carabinieri and injuring a number of others near Empoli during the 1921 riots.

Each occupied a numbered seat in the cages, and each juror will have a 300-page guide book containing the photographs and penal record of each prisoner to enable the juror to follow the trial.

The prisoners sleep and eat in dormitories adjoining the court room, and are heavily guarded.

JOHN BARRY WALKS BY SIX POLICEMEN IN EASY ESCAPE

Chicago, May 8.—John Barry, 34, of "Big Tim" Murphy, Chicago lawyer, leader now serving a term in Leavenworth federal prison for the Dearborn street railroad mail robbery, and who was convicted with Murphy, calmly walked out of the federal building today and escaped just after hearing an order denying his right to appeal and affirming a sentence of four years imprisonment for the mail robbery.

Barry not only eluded the federal officers but walked past six policemen from the state's attorney's office who had been waiting outside the circuit court of appeals to arrest him on a state charge.

He must surrender tonight or forfeit a $50,000 bond posted pending the appeal.

"Breakfast Conference" New Fad Set by President Coolidge

DOES NOT "PRESIDE," BUT JUST LISTENS

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.
(Copyright, 1924, by United News.)
Washington, May 8.—Long before there are signs of activity in the capital, while the morning has hardly recovered its equilibrium from the clatter of the milk wagon and has not given way to the hurried tramp of the government workers, a bustle may be noticed any time nowadays about the white house.

Automobiles drive up the shaded avenue to the front porch. Their occupants get out and enter the mansion. The president is having one of his "breakfast conferences."

Sleepy-eyed citizens who are not government employees and therefore have to go to work early like people in other cities—stare in wonder through the bars of the tall iron fence about the white house grounds. It's not like the old days. Dinners were common enough in the executive mansions—but breakfasts! Well, it does look queer, but it's been a long time since there was a New England man in the white house, and there's no telling what these New Englanders will do.

Anybody who knows Coolidge, though, will not wonder. It is an expression of his character. He gets up early. Why not save time by having congressional leaders down during breakfast? It saves his time and theirs and is a congenial way of getting together.

The guests are ushered into the breakfast room to the right of the large reception hall. It is light and airy, with cream-colored walls, and overlooks Pennsylvania avenue—a congenial place, a friendly room, contrasting with the dark, baronial state dining room just to its rear.

When the guests have assembled, Coolidge enters, dignified, but smiling in his peculiar way. He shakes hands all around and they sit down to breakfast.

The menu does not stick strictly to the New England breakfast. There are pancakes and maple syrup. It is a breakfast of the traditional pie, missing, perhaps as a compromise to those from other sections who attend, as one senator suggested, and there are eggs and coffee and toast.

A normal man's breakfast.

President Coolidge does not "preside" at these breakfasts. He does not lead the conversation, or break in with a series of funny stories, as was the way of other chief executives on such occasions. Mostly he sits quietly and listens, as is his way, occasionally putting in a few words giving his views on the subject under discussion.

If he has anything particular to say to any one senator present, he states it—consistently as he knows, in a few words. For the most part, he lets the others talk, and he listens. At breakfast Thursday morning, for instance, he made it clear in reference to taxation that he could not permit resentment at the actions of republicans in the senate which are contrary to his views.

When the breakfast is over, the guests rise. The president shakes hands around, smiles, and the affair is over.

Bobbed-Haired Maid Scoffs At Stiletto Hold-Up Story

Admits Taking Auto Ride But Denies Bandit Charge

VERA HAMBRICK

When New York sets a style Atlanta loses no time in falling in line with the mode of the day.

Just at present, bob-haired bandits are the vogue in Gotham, and Celia Cooney's exploits with smoking revolver backed by daring courage have spurred "the New York of Dixie" to emulate her northern big sister's example in producing, capturing and holding in durance vile a so-called "bob-haired bandit."

With the result that Vera Hambrick, 19, of an Ivy street address, and with abbreviated tresses, languishes in the city bastille while detectives bustle about with the intention of connecting her with a stiletto "stick-up" Monday night in which Horace Crumley, of 75 Duane street, claims he was victimized to the extent of his personal pride and $20.

Vera Not Worried.
Vera, as cool and debonair as the famed Celia, Thursday afternoon reclined in dreamy ease in two mattress quarters, blew cigarette smoke rings at the ceiling and conversed with a Constitution reporter.

With unbroken calm she reviewed and emphatically denied the charges lodged against her, and only when she spoke of an alleged threat to use a stiletto on her self-styled victim did her eyes gleam with anger.

"That's all rot," she declared with passion. "I'm no bandit and don't intend to become one, and whoever says 'the sentence ended with scornful expletives.'"

Gotham Indulges in Spree CELIA AND EDDIE LEAD SOB CHORUS AT PARTING Of Tears for Bandit Couple

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, May 8.—New York, which howled for the head of the bob-haired gang-girl a few weeks ago, had an emotional reaction, and a handsome good girl Thursday as Celia Cooney, the slight, 20-year-old human scrub from the gutters of the lower east side parted from her husband, Eddie, at Raymond street jail.

Both are bound to prison for from 6 to 20 years, the length of time depending on their behavior, she to Auburn where the feminine yeags are kept, and he to the country club, as his associates in the Brooklyn speakies and poolrooms affectionately refer to Sing Sing prison with its movies, its ball games, Broadway shows and pleasant menu.

Tears Are Plentiful.
Celia cried; Eddie, who cruelly shot a man during one of their family robbery expeditions, blubbered in self-pity; Celia's mother, Mrs. Roth, who sent the girl out begging as a child and utterly neglected her throughout her growing years, caught the dramatic spirit of the occasion and sprayed herself with belated tears.

Warden Honeck of Raymond street jail had to lay firm hands on his emotions as the crowd in the street yelled "Goodbye, Celia—and good luck." And through the newspapers which became somewhat lachrymose at the last moment with the assurance that Celia actually was going to prison for her misconduct, the entire city enjoyed a thoroughly soporific day. As an outlet for mass emotion, it was as good as East Lynne.

Got "Murderess" Courtesy.
Celia couldn't have received more elaborate privilege and courtesy if she had been a beautiful and cultured murderess awaiting acquittal, instead of a rough-mannered, ill-favored little stray awaiting transportation to prison.

Too Late To Do Much Now.
"Write while you're away, Celia," said the old lady as she went down the shadowy corridor. "If there's anything we can do for you, let us

TOO PESSIMISTIC, SEC. WILBUR CALLS COONTZ'S REPORT

Request Already Made of Congress To Remedy Weakness in Battleships and Auxiliary Vessels.

SECRETARY MENTIONS MANEUVERS SHOWING

Reiterates Stand for 100 Per Cent Navy, Plus Preparedness in Certain Department.

New York, May 8.—Characterizing the report of Admiral Coontz on the weakness of the fleet of winter maneuvers, both in the matter of battleships and auxiliary vessels, as "entirely too pessimistic," Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy, declares that the report is fully understood and anticipated.

"There is nothing surprising in the report of Admiral Coontz," said Wilbur. "As I understand it from heads of departments in Washington, almost all he has suggested has already been reported to congress by the navy department, and requests have been made for appropriations to carry out necessary changes."

Wilbur asked if the admiral had said anything concerning the "fine work of the navy," and without waiting for a reply he added:

"There were some very fine records made by the men of the fleet and the officers—some of which are of a character that should be published. But when I return to Washington, I will confer with heads of departments to ascertain to what extent we can give the public these fine records that have been made."

As for recent charges that the secretary "for 100 per cent equality with any other power, plus a reasonable preponderance in items not covered by the department treaty," Wilbur said that he was a "militarist," as stated in several foreign dispatches, he smiled and replied:

"In New York I am thought of as a pacifist."

He then charged that the navy had fallen below the 5-5-3 ratio set by the disarmament conference, Secretary Wilbur said exact figures were being compiled for congress on the subject.

"The results of this compilation, in my opinion," he concluded, "will show that that story and criticism is utterly preposterous."

NORRIS PROPOSES PARTY LINE BREAK ON STATE TICKETS

Lincoln, Neb., May 8.—Nited States Senator G. W. Norris, in a letter to C. A. Sorenson today, favored abolition of "the party circle," electing all state officers on a non-partisan basis, and said he was willing to have the same rule apply to candidates for congress.

Washington, May 8.—Senator Norris said today no change in his party affiliations was meant by the assertion in his letter to Charles E. Sorenson concerning not making a campaign over the state for the entire republican ticket. He added that he did not recall this particular letter, the statement was not new, and the letter may have been written a year ago.

The senator declared he had made such assertions for the past two years, explaining that in Nebraska the ballots carry party circles, by marking which the vote is cast for the entire republican ticket. He added that he did not recall this particular letter, the statement was not new, and the letter may have been written a year ago.

Conference Action To Delay Jap Ban Under Sharp Fire

MADISON AVENUE EXTENSION PUSHED

City Council Approves Contracts for Purchase of Right of Way to Fair and Forsyth.

Madison avenue extension to Forsyth street before the end of this year loomed as probable Thursday when general council approved contracts for purchase of the right of way from Castlebury to the Fair and Forsyth street corner, exhausting the $33,500 appropriated to obtain the right of way. Madison avenue already runs to a terminus in Castlebury street and the additional land to widen it to 80 feet is to be procured without additional cost to the city.

Contracts approved by council Thursday had been negotiated by J. L. McCord, agent for the city, for the Dr. Salter property, Elchberg property, Regenstein property and Cohen and Brice property.

Fulton county commissioners have pledged the county to do the construction work on the extension if the city provides the right of way. Mr. McCord said that he believed the right of way would be ready to turn over to the county within 90 days.

The Madison avenue extension with Spring street will form the new Henry Grady boulevard from Brookwood station on the north straight through the heart of the city to the junction of South Forsyth and Fair street on the southside, giving a new direct outlet from the terminal station plaza southward and the only exclusively vehicular traffic artery through the city. Other transverse thoroughfares have street car tracks along them.

Airplane Search For Maj. Martin Made in 2 Weeks

Other Planes in World Flight Off Upon Journey, Advances Indicate.

Seattle, Wash., May 8.—A search by airplane for Major Frederick L. Martin, missing world flight commander of the United States army, will begin at Chignik, Alaska, in about two weeks, according to plans revealed here today.

Meanwhile the latest advice indicated that three fliers of the army had taken the air from Alaska island, in the Aleutians, today on their way around the earth.

Plans were declared complete for the survey of the Alaska peninsula and waters adjacent to it for a clue to the whereabouts of the major.

That Major Martin and Sergeant Harvey will be found to have perished in the Bering sea was a fear expressed among men of the army, the navy and the coast guard in the Puget sound district, many of them familiar by long experience with the severity of nature in the north.

Members of Both Parties Are Sharp in Criticism of Move To Delay Application of Clause.

ADMISSION OF ALIENS IS AFFAIR OF U. S.

Senator Lodge Declares Against Any Special Treaty on Immigration, California Solons Split.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, May 8.—Approval by senate and house conferees at the request of President Coolidge of a new section of the immigration bill to defer the effective date of Japanese exclusion from July 1 to March 1, 1925, that opportunity may be given for diplomatic negotiations to abrogate the gentlemen's agreement, was subjected to severe criticism today during a two-hour debate in the senate.

From both sides of the chamber disagreement with the president's position and compliance to it as voted by the conference was expressed. Not only did the step constitute a move towards surrendering the sovereignty right of the United States to deal with "a strictly domestic question," it was charged, but it indicated an attempt to set aside the expressed decision of both houses of congress by subterfuge.

Get Action In House Today.

The conference report was not submitted to the senate today but was presented to the house by Chairman Johnson of the immigration committee with the announcement that it would be called up for action tomorrow.

Mr. Johnson and republican leaders, for the most part, expressed confidence that the house would approve the report. On the other hand, members, out of sympathy with the Japanese exclusion provision said they would seek to recommit the report to the conference, and they asserted they would have the votes to do so.

There were indications that an attempt might be made to have the exclusion substitute thrown out on the point of order that the conferees exceeded their authority in writing it into the bill. Republican leaders and some democrats, opposed to the provision, however, were of the opinion that such a point would be overruled.

Robinson Opens Fight.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader, opened the fight in the senate and commented at length upon the "quick change" in the president's attitude on Japanese exclusion before and after the California primaries.

Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, chief of the senate conferees, in reply declared action of the conference should be interpreted as confirming the status of immigration as an exclusively domestic matter. It was intended, he said, to obtain the abrogation of the gentlemen's agreement which seemed to jeopardize such a classification.

Lodge Deserts Coolidge.
Senator Reed's was practically the only voice in defense of the conferees. Even Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, chairman of the foreign relations committee, declared it would be "simple hypocrisy" for him to attempt to argue that a special treaty on immigration was desirable. "I have always believed," he added,

"that the question of who should be admitted to the United States was a matter to be determined by the congress. In my judgment the conferees and the entire legislative body including the president must say to the rest of the world: 'We alone have the power to say who shall come into the United States as immigrants.'"

The suggestion that the conferees reconsider their decision was advanced by Senator Shortridge, republican, of the same state, asserting the contemplated delay would have the result of opening the nation's gates to a flood of Asiatic immigration.

know." But the mother is wretchedly poor and there probably is little that she can do for Celia now, although she might have done much for her when she had the chance, 10 or 15 years ago.

A little while later, Honeck escorted Celia to his office where she consulted with her sister, May, and May's husband, while the mother waited outside on a bench, her gray head sagging on her bosom, her gray eyes gazing vacantly, perhaps into the past when, the probation report said, she let Celia sleep in coal-holes.

"Her Roll Turned Over."

Next came the attendants from Auburn prison, a man and a woman, whom Celia was not well pleased to meet, although she evinced no hostility. Honeck went to the safe and got Celia's roll of $890, left from the $1,000 which she received for her first venture into honest literature, the story of her life. She had spent $20 for flesh-colored stockings and other fixings of her court costume to look her best before the judge. She gave Honeck $150 for Eddie and the Auburn attendant took the rest to keep for her.

At last Eddie was brought in. He stopped. The officers turned away. Eddie rushed into a clinch and both bodies swayed with sob.

"It'll be a long, long time; a long, long time," Cooney moaned. He straightened up. "We got to make the best of it," he said.

Gotham to Forget Sunday.

"We got to, Ed," Celia agreed, wiping her cheeks. "And the time ain't so long. We'll be together again, sometime, anyway." For a few minutes they talked in whispers and Honeck at last said, "All right, Ed. Time to go."

With fresh tears squirting down his face, Cooney was taken back to his cell.

Celia gathered up her dunnage and went groping out the door through the mists that were in her eyes, through the emotional crowd to the market which carried her to Jefferson Market jail, where she will be near the railroad station for an early getaway.

Ed probably will go to Sing Sing Saturday and then New York will forget the two-haired bandit who has been in re there for nearly a year, terrorizing the town with her pistol.

GRADY HOSPITAL PAY WARD VOTED

ordinance committee by a vote of 17 to 9 after Alderman Hartsfield, Councilman W. E. Saunders, Councilman Bob Pennington, and others had argued careful consideration. Councilman Couch joined Councilman Inman in urging immediate passage as a partial remedy for the traffic accident situation here.

Councilman Inman explained that the city can not control drivers other than those operating taxi cabs or jitney busses. The city does issue permits for those classes of drivers and has the power to keep any one of them off the streets if he proves a menace to public safety.

Police Chief Change.

Another outburst of oratory developed over introduction of the Inman ordinance to abolish the office of chief of police. Alderman Carpenter and Councilman Couch urged council to kill the paper at once. Councilman Inman moved that it be referred to the charter revision committee. The Inman motion was adopted with only Carpenter and Couch dissenting. Carpenter declared that it was aimed solely to prevent any possible reinstatement of James L. Beavers as chief "although," he said, "at least 99 per cent of the people believe the courts will reinstate him when they review his trial."

Councilman Horace Russell proposed an appropriation of $2,000 to publish a new city code, which was referred to the finance committee and to accept Rogers Realty and Trust company's offer of gift of parks down the middle of Lanier boulevard, which was referred to the park committee.

The aldermanic board concurred in council's action of Monday in overruling the mayor's veto of 10 papers reinstating former city pensioners and to raise T. B. Lanford, prison superintendent, to $2,400 a year instead of $2,100 he draws at present.

Time Limit Extended.

Council Thursday adopted the Armistead traffic law amendment to permit railway passenger trains to obstruct grade crossing at Pryor and Central avenue not more than 10 minutes instead of three minutes as at present. Its author stated that federal statutes passed in 1908, after the three minute limit had been adopted, required safety tests on coupling to be made that required seven or eight minutes.

Councilman Oscar Williamson, railway engineer member of council, and Councilman Tom Slapper, who had been a railroad worker before he entered the practice of law, both supported Alderman Armistead in urging adoption of the change.

tion building between the hours of 11 and 1 o'clock and between 5 and 7 o'clock. All reservations should be made as early as possible. Hotel rates run from $1.50 per day to $3.00 a day. American plan, and reservations are being made by The Constitution in the order in which they are filed.

Leave Early Saturday.

Tourists will leave Atlanta about 7 o'clock Saturday morning, May 17, and will return May 23, but any desiring to come home sooner or stay longer may do so.

On the trip out the tour will be divided into two sections, each headed by a Constitution pathfinder. The first division, traveling at a steady pace, is due in Panama City, 337 miles away, by noon of the following day. The second division, taking the express, will arrive about 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Both sections will make ample stops for the comfort of the tourists, and trouble cars will be provided to take care of mechanical difficulties or fire changes.

A complete moving picture history of the trip and the activities at St. Petersburg, showing it to be a city of each member of the party, will be taken. Following the trip the picture will be screened for an entire week at Loew's Grand theater.

Several cities along the route have volunteered to provide varied entertainment and refreshments and officials of Columbia, Ala., have agreed to accept the tour badge as a pass on the toll bridge over the Chattahoochee.

PARTIES NECESSARY, COOLIDGE DECLARES

Washington, May 8.—Party organization was declared to be necessary to efficient government by President Coolidge in an address at the white house today to students of a "political campaign school," conducted by the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia.

"It is necessary to have party organization if we are to have effective and efficient government," the president said. "The only difference between a mob and a trained army is organization and the only difference between a disorganized country and one that has the advantage of a wise and sound government is fundamental."

"I don't mean by that a narrow and bigoted partisanship, but one that recognizes the necessity to cooperate with one another if we are in any way to secure the results that we desire. That has been the model of our country from the time when it was established down to the present day. I don't know of anyone that has represented the real ideals of American any better than those of party loyalty, either on the one side or the other."

Men of the type of Lincoln and Grant, no less than the type of Cleveland and Wilson, have been loyal to their party, and desired to have party support and party government for the purpose of giving an efficient administration.

The president warned the students, all women, to cease looking for ideal candidates for office.

"I have been in public life for some time and I learned to say a long time ago that I was all through looking for ideal candidates for office," he said. "They don't exist, and we have to make the best of what we have, for it is only in the way that we are able to make any progress."

"Get candidates that are just as near the ideals as possible. That is what we always want, and after you have done what you can in the way of selecting a candidate, get the best results and do what you can to support the principles that that candidate represents. For after all, if we are to promote good government, we are to promote good principles, it must be by the support of those men and women that represent those principles."

DOHENY MAKES DENIAL IN OIL SUIT ANSWER

Los Angeles, May 8.—General denial of all allegations made by the government of illegality and conspiracy in connection with the leasing of valuable oil lands in Naval Reserve Number 1, Kern county, was set forth in an answer to the government's suit filed with the United States district court clerk here late today by attorneys representing the Pan-American Petroleum company and the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company.

Denial of improper representations by Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, and allegations by the government that E. L. Doheny, former president of the Pan-American interests, paid Fall $100,000 on November 30, 1921, as a part of a conspiracy to obtain control of the reserve lands, is contained in the document.

The answer admits, however, the receipt by the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company of a letter signed by E. C. Finney, assistant secretary of the interior, and Edwin Denby, former secretary of the navy, conferring the right to a lease to land in the Mount Diablo region in Kern county, which the government alleges was written with intent that the land should be acquired secretly, without competitive bidding, without authority of the law. The allegation is denied.

The contention by the government that the naval reserve land named in the lease are underlain by "vast quantities of oil and gas" insuring Doheny more than $100,000,000 profit, is denied and strict proof of petroleum in large quantities in the region is asked.

Approximately $10,000,000 had been expended or had been obligated by the Pan-American company for refinery, pipe lines, docking, etc., in the vicinity of Los Angeles, the answer alleges, and if the contract were annulled, great depreciation would result.

Two men disappear.

Police Search for N. L. Warren and L. C. Lew.

Police have been requested to search for two men, reported to have disappeared from their homes Wednesday morning. The missing men are N. L. Warren, 30, of the insurance department of The Journal, and L. C. Dew, 30, of Adair's.

Warren was reported to have been with a sister with whom he resides at 358 Peachtree street. She stated that he left home for work Wednesday morning, but failed to report for work and had not been seen since. She attributes his disappearance to a loss of memory, as she told officers that he was stricken with amnesia about six months ago, disappearing under circumstances to those of Wednesday. He was found in a local hotel three days later, and recovered his memory.

Dew also left home for work Wednesday morning, his wife reported, and failed to arrive at his place of employment. He suffered a nervous breakdown recently, she said, and she expressed fears that he had committed suicide in a fit of despondency.

Ossining, N. Y.—When a convict enters Sing Sing he usually give him a job such as he had outside. "What was yours?" Acting Warden McInerney asked Harry Mitchell. "Aviator," replied Mitchell, who until sentenced from New York for "sneaking" was a sky-writer. McInerney is up in the air about where Mitchell will be placed, but insists he'll have to stay on the ground.

TRIVERS STORE TO OPEN TONIGHT

Doors of the newest Trivers Clothes Shop—that at 35 Peachtree street—will swing open at 8 o'clock tonight for the initial public inspection of Atlanta's newest exclusive men and boys clothing store. A public reception in connection with the opening will last three hours, and an invitation has been extended to women as well as men.

Mayor Walter Sims will turn the front door key and officially open the store. He also will deliver a short address, welcoming the company to the city. During the reception, Warren Seven Aces will play, and souvenirs—cigars, cigarettes and other articles for the men, and flowers for women—will be distributed.

Among officials of the company who are in Atlanta for the opening are Nathan Trivers, of New York, president of the company; Joseph Al Cooper and Edward Cowan, of New York, vice presidents; H. B. Sobina, head designer; Al Harris, advertising manager; Al Lambert, head of the New York sales force; Charles Lee, manager of the Birmingham store; John M. Thompson, head of the New Orleans store; Bruce K. Hill, manager of the Nashville store, and John K. Vandergriff, manager of the Chattanooga store.

The shop here is the eighteenth established by the company, two being located in New York city, and the remainder scattered through the south. The company specializes in "two pants" suits, as two pairs of trousers are sold with every suit. "The extra pair doubles the wear," is the company's slogan.

NEW FERTILIZER PLANNED N BID

Washington, May 8.—The Union Carbide company's substitute proposal for operating Muscle Shoals under a 50-year lease was presented to the senate agricultural committee today by S. Cressy Morrison, of New York, representing the company.

Morrison said the Union Carbide company was willing to abide by the original offer submitted last year but presented the new offer in case the committee did not accept the first.

Under the first bid the company would lease for 50 years the nitrate plants and Waco quarry and purchase annually at the "going rates" 50,000 horsepower produced at Muscle Shoals by the government. This would net the government approximately $82,000,000 during the 50-year lease, Morrison said. The company would agree to manufacture 40,000 tons annually of fixed nitrogen in the form of "urea," a new fertilizer.

Morrison said his company delayed submitting the new bid pending investigations to determine what could be accomplished at Muscle Shoals. "The nitrate business in this country is in a state of flux," he said.

In order to make certain that the Muscle Shoals would not become obsolete, he said provision was made in the bid to change the process at any time.

Morrison said "urea" was a discovery of a Swede, was an entirely new process and that the company held an option on the patent.

The Union Carbide company has no connection, "either direct or indirect with any other bidder for Muscle Shoals," he said.

To Distribute Power.

Answering Chairman Norris, Morrison said under the first bid all power developed would be left to the government, but under the new bid the company would control the power and distribute it at reasonable rates, under the supervision of the federal power commission.

He said the cheap power at Muscle Shoals should not be used to manufacture a commodity which could be produced more economically by some process other than from hydro-electric power.

Comparing the carbide bid with Ford's, he said in the first six years of operation Ford would pay a total of $2,937,512 and Adair would be simple to all of the property except the dams. The carbide company, he said, would pay in the first six years a total of $9,840,000 under the new bid as $3,480,000 under the old bid and have no title to the property.

Before Morrison completed his testimony, the committee went into executive session to consider the date for ending the hearing.

FLORIDA WOMAN HELD FOR HUSBAND'S DEATH

Bartow, Fla., May 8.—Mrs. Daisy Milton, 14-year-old wife of Levi Milton, is in jail here today, charged with causing the death of her husband. According to Sheriff Logan, she confessed last night to having placed a tablet of slow-acting poison in Milton's coffee about two weeks ago. Milton became ill and was removed to a hospital in Lakeland, where he died last Thursday.

She sheriff said the girl told him she poisoned her husband after a quarrel "to make him sick," but not to kill him. They had been married only a few months, she said. She was arrested in Plant City several days ago. No arrangements for a preliminary hearing were announced.

Give Right of Way To Sick and Hurt Police Are Told

Following complaint that a traffic officer Wednesday refused to halt traffic sufficiently long enough to allow an injured man to be lifted from an automobile and carried to a physician's office in the Candler building, Acting Night Chief C. P. Connelly late Thursday night issued instructions to all police officers in the city that human life and safety are to be given first consideration, and that assisting ill or injured persons comprises part of every officer's duties.

The complaint was made to Police Commissioner J. A. Reilly by R. A. Gher, of the Southern Iron and Equipment company. Mr. Garner stated that a man injured in an automobile accident had been picked up by a truck driver of the company, and taken to the Candler building, but that the traffic officer on duty refused to allow the vehicle to stop long enough even to allow the injured man to be removed, although circumstances had been explained to him.

LEGION AUXILIARIES MEETING AT COLUMBIA

COLORED ODD FELLOWS TO CELEBRATE SUNDAY

A large street parade, headed by several brass bands, will feature the 78th annual celebration Sunday afternoon by the colored Odd Fellows of Georgia.

The parade will form at the Rucker building at 12:30 o'clock, and march to the Ebenezer Baptist church, where exercises will open at 1:30 o'clock. The women's auxiliary will meet at 1 o'clock at the church.

WATER PLANT GIVEN TO STONE MOUNTAIN

E. G. Blecher, of Dayton, Ohio, acting general manager of the DeLo Light company, Thursday donated a DeLo waterworks outfit to the Stone Mountain Memorial. Mr. Blecher after visiting the memorial, was impressed with the fact that there was no running water in the sculptor's studio, as well as with the greatness of the enterprise with which Gutzon Borglum is engaged on the huge mountain.

E. H. Danforth and Phil L'Engle, Atlanta representatives of the DeLo company, were asked to find out from Captain J. G. Tucker, in charge of the work in the absence of Sculptor Borglum, whether the enterprise would accept a brand new waterworks outfit to solve the water supply problem in a hurry. The prompt reply was that the association would accept anything of value to aid the work, and Manager Blecher at once registered an unconditional promise of the system.

The gift is regarded as one of the best that has been made to the work.

SIDEWALK AND CURB WORK STILL TIED UP

Further tie-up of sidewalks, driveway and concrete curb work until contractors make lower prices was voted by the aldermanic board Thursday afternoon.

Council had approved contracts substantially higher in price than those which had been vetoed by Mayor Walter A. Sims as too high two months ago.

Alderman J. R. Bachman moved to hold up the contracts in order to negotiate for better prices, declaring that it looked like an attempt on the part of contractors to exact reprisals from the city for looking after interests of citizens.

Granite curb contracts were awarded to the Pine Mountain company which had reduced the amount of the bid vetoed by the mayor, and that work will be in shape to proceed as soon as the mayor signs the papers.

City ordinance requires that all sidewalks be laid by contractors specified by the city and the cost assessed against the property owners affected.

GREEK ASSOCIATION NAMES NEW OFFICERS

The following officers have been elected to serve the Greek Educational Progressive association during 1924: James Cotsakis, president; Angel Sotiropoulos, vice-president; George Campbell, treasurer; E. I. Coolidge, secretary.

The association was organized in Atlanta about a year ago, and now numbers more than 200 members. In Atlanta there are over 1,200 Greeks, of whom about 75 per cent are naturalized. Of the remaining 25 per cent a large number have already filed their preliminary applications for citizenship.

National headquarters are located in Philadelphia. There are now forty-six chapters in the United States.

1924 INSPECTION OF STATE-OWNED RAILROAD STARTS

The Georgia public service commission devoted Thursday to its annual inspection of properties of the Western & Atlantic, the state-owned railroad. The commission traveled over the line on a special train, furnished by the road, examining all depots, bridges and trestles between Atlanta and Chattanooga.

Those making the trip Thursday included Commissioners Paul Trammell, chairman; John T. Boifeuillet, James A. Perry, James D. Price and Walter McDonald, and Secretary Albert Collier. They were accompanied by officials of the N. & A. St. L. lessees of the state road.

TWO ATTORNEYS CLASH

Hot Words, Challenge to Fight; Then Judge Acts.

A fistie bout between Samuel A. Hewlett and Daniel W. Rountree, Atlanta lawyers, was averted only by intervention of court attendants in Judge H. M. Reid's court Thursday morning, after a verbal combat. The difficulty arose when Hewlett charged Rountree with "bulldozing" a witness. The "lie" was passed, according to officers of the court, and an invitation to "come on outside," extended.

Before an adjournment could be taken to the sidewalk, however, Judge Reid put the two lawyers under arrest until each paid $25 for contempt.

FUNERAL OF BLOSSER WILL BE HELD TODAY

Funeral services for Clarence Blosser, president of the Blosser Company of Atlanta, who died Wednesday morning at 8101 St. Miss., will be held at 11 o'clock this morning from the chapel of Atwell & Lowndes. Rev. James R. Mitchell, pastor of St. Mark's Methodist church, of which Mr. Blosser was a member, will conduct the services. Interment will be in West View.

Funeral services will be for J. R. Holliday, Harry Bayler, Ralph Reed, R. Winston Harvey, Dr. Will Elkin and Dr. G. H. Myhrall. Out of respect to Mr. Blosser the Blosser company was closed Thursday and will remain closed today until after the funeral.

MILLER IS ELECTED ON SEABOARD BOARD

Petersburg, Va., May 8.—W. W. Miller, counsel for the Seaboard Air Line railway in New York, was elected to its board of directors at the annual meeting of stockholders here today. The other directors were re-elected. Approval of small contracts was the only other business transacted at the meeting, it was announced.

TO DELIVER SERIES OF LECTURES HERE

MRS. VIDA REED-STONE.

Mrs. Vida Reed-Stone, of Los Angeles, chief representative in America of the Order of the Round Table, international organization for young people, will give three free lectures in Atlanta on May 10 and 11.

The first lecture, "Citizens of the Tomorrow," will be given at Carnegie assembly room Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

The second lecture, "Twentieth Century Knighthood," will be delivered at the Liberal Christian church on West Peachtree street at 3:30 o'clock, and the last of the series a stereopticon lecture, on "Parsifal," Wagner's last and greatest music-drama, will be a feature at the Liberal Christian church at 8 o'clock Sunday night.

SUICIDE VICTIM IS LAID TO REST HERE THURSDAY

Funeral services for Victor Jacobson, 319 Hunter street, who committed suicide in Grant park early Wednesday morning by drinking lysol, were held at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning from the chapel of Greenberg & Bond. Interment was in Greenwood.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of death caused by lysol poisoning at an inquest Thursday at the undertaking parlor of Greenberg & Bond. Relatives attribute the man's act to despondency following loss of money in recent business transactions.

PRISON OFFICIALS TO CONVEENE HERE

Prison officials of the southeastern states will meet in Atlanta for a conference on state prison conditions, May 28 and 29. At request of the allocation committee of the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor, Governor Clifford Walker Thursday sent invitations to governors of all southeastern states, asking that they be represented at the convention.

The chief subject to be discussed, it is understood, is that of devising some plan whereby prison inmates may be employed on making supplies for the prison and for other state institutions, thus doing away with the practice of contract labor.

There is no contract labor in the Georgia state prison at Milledgeville, the time of the inmates being occupied on the prison farm. It would be entirely possible under the present Georgia law, it is said, to establish any form of manufacturing plant desired at the prison, for making supplies for state institutions.

DRIVE FOR MEMBERS OPENED BY ENGINEERS

Having established a luxurious suite of club rooms on the fifth floor of the Healey building for entertainment of members, the Atlanta chapter of the American Association of Engineers opened a drive for 100 new members Thursday. All contractors are welcomed as associate members in the Atlanta chapter. Information as to details of the drive are obtainable from the chief of construction of the city hall, and at the club rooms.

CUT SPEED LIMIT, JETT AND BARNETT URGE FOR SAFETY

With six deaths and 65 injured from automobile accidents during April, Captain M. V. Barnett, of the accident prevention bureau, and Police Chief E. L. Jett, Thursday, began a study of ways and means to minimize accidents.

Among their recommendations were that speed of automobiles be decreased from 20 miles per hour within the congested area (or inner fire limits) to 15 miles; from 25 miles without such limits to 20 miles per hour, and that drivers be required to come to a full stop upon approaching street intersections, especially within the congested area.

Figures compiled by Captain Barnett's office showed that automobiles figured in 171 accidents during April, and that work of men in his department brought the city a revenue of $7,738 in fines. The total arrests by the department during the month totaled 648, of which 218 were charged with speeding and 146 with reckless driving.

Additional recommendations for preventing accidents are expected to be made at the safety meeting at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the auditorium of the First Baptist church, at which Reuben R. Arnold, Atlanta attorney and others will make addresses. The meeting will be under auspices of the Atlanta Safety council.

BOIFEUILLET SPEAKS AT LAWYERS' MEETING

John T. Boifeuillet, of the Georgia public service commission, will speak at a meeting of the Atlanta Lawyers club at 6 o'clock tonight at the Kimball House. An entertainment program has been arranged, reports officers will be read.

CECIL HOTEL ANNEX SUITS NOW IN COURT

Litigation filed in Fulton superior court in connection with construction of the annex to the Cecil hotel came up for trial before Judge George L. Bell Thursday.

Two suits are involved. One is by the Griffin Construction company against John A. Manget, builder of the annex, to collect a note of $17,954.14 with interest at 8 per cent. The other is by Mr. Manget against the construction company to recover alleged damages and excess construction cost amounting to $50,000.

The Manget suit alleges that the construction company estimated cost of the annex at $241,380, including 7 per cent for the company, but that this estimate was exceeded by $33,473.88. On the strength of the original estimate, Mr. Manget alleged, he added a roof garden at an estimated cost of $19,933, but that the actual cost was $15,000 in excess of this sum. Mr. Manget sued for the excess sums and for damages from alleged improper construction.

Attorneys McElreath & Scott represent the construction company. Attorneys Harwell, Fairman & Barrett represent Manget.

CUBAN IN DENIAL OF PART IN PLOT

Ocala, Fla., May 8.—Despite virtually definite establishment today that he is the son of General Garcia y Valez, president of the Veterans' and Patriots' association of Cuba, Ray Garcia, one of three Cubans held here for alleged violation of the neutrality laws, steadfastly refused tonight to discuss his identity or any other matter concerning the case, except to reiterate his innocence.

Shown advice from Tampa positively identifying him as Calisto, one of the Cuban revolutionary leaders' two sons, and asked for a statement of confirmation, he directed the following reply to newspapermen:

"I deeply regret I cannot answer your question because my lawyer has instructed me not to answer any questions at all. I do not know a thing about why I am accused."

LODGE INTRODUCES WORLD COURT PLAN

Washington, May 8.—Establishment of a world court at The Hague, to which the United States would adhere, was proposed today in a resolution introduced by Senator Lodge, Massachusetts, chairman of the foreign relations committee.

For the purpose of creating the new tribunal, President Coolidge would be respectfully requested to propose the calling of the third Hague conference.

The resolution embodied a complete plan for the proposed court. It would be composed of 16 judges—four of them deputies—who would be selected by an electoral commission.

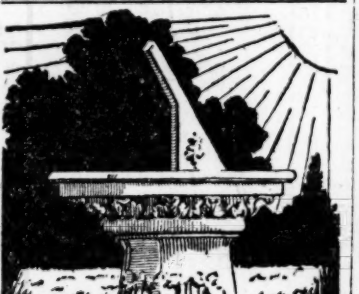

To Sit Once a Year.

This commission would consist of a "general committee composed of representatives designated by the signatory powers, and a special committee composed of representatives designated by the United States, British empire, France, Italy and Japan, together with representatives of five other signatory powers, which powers shall be selected by the signatory powers by a majority vote from time to time."

Members of the court would be selected by the electoral commission "from the list of persons nominated by the national groups in the permanent court arbitration."

The tribunal would sit at least once a year with extraordinary sessions authorized at the call of its president.

The signatory powers would recognize "as compulsory, ipso facto" the jurisdiction of the court in all cases of legal dispute concerning interpretation of a treaty, questions of international law, evidence of breach of international obligation, and the nature

'LONE WOLF' ENDS RUM RING EXPOSE

Mobile, Ala., May 8.—"Lone Wolf" Gonzales, general prohibition agent, who, according to his testimony, became the friend and confidant of leading bootleggers during his work here last summer, today concluded his colorful expose of the "inside" of Mobile's alleged "rum ring" from the witness stand in the trial of 60 persons for conspiracy.

Gonzales described how the big six wholesalers brought their booze from the "rum runners" at the sea to their customers in Mobile and points in the interior; how Percy Kearns, local attorney who is defendant in the case, acted as official "go-between" for the "big six" and paid him a total of $2,125 for protection; and how he accepted bribes from Dan Demison, defendant who is one of the "big six," and John McEvoy, another of the defendants, directly, and from numerous others of the defendants indirectly.

Gonzales took the witness stand at the beginning of the afternoon session Wednesday and occupied it throughout today. His cross-examination will begin with the convening of court tomorrow morning. It is understood that Aubrey Boyles, United States district attorney, who is said to be chiefly responsible for the "clean-up campaign" that resulted in the present conspiracy trial, will follow Gonzales on the stand.

THREE 'BETTER HOMES' WILL OPEN SUNDAY

The three "Better Homes" to be opened to the public at 3 o'clock Sunday with religious services, are veritable hives of activity. From all parts of the city, furnishings of various kinds are finding their way into these homes. Not for a moment must it be thought that this is a haphazard collection of merchandise, or a "ready furnished house to rent."

Every article has been selected by an expert and placed where it will bear the proper relation to every other article in the house. All this has been done to conform to budgets suitable to each home and location.

When Saturday night comes, the doors are closed and a nice "blue coat" is seen ready to keep watch over night, the houses will be ready for their imaginary families to take charge. Clothes will be found in the closets, food in the ice box, and the table all set for the next meal.

Mrs. Newton C. Wing, general chairman, wishes to urge everybody who uses these homes, to feel the atmosphere surrounding them. Efforts of workers will be wasted unless members of the community see what has been done. No one will be admitted to any of the three before 3 o'clock Sunday.

The homes are located as follows: Home No. 1, 212 Virginia avenue, four blocks west of Highland; Home No. 2, 281 Dill avenue, three blocks east of North Boulevard line; Home No. 3, 45 B street, one block beyond end of West Hunter line, turn south two blocks, only one block from new colored high school.

MRS. WILSON GOES TO VIRGINIA HOME OF HUSBAND'S KIN

Washington, May 8.—Yielding at last to the suggestions of her friends, Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson has left Washington to rest with relatives of her first husband at Newmarket, Va. She is the guest of Col. and Mrs. E. T. Brown. Col. Brown is a cousin of the first wife of the late President Wilson. Miss Margaret Wilson will soon join her.

This is the first time Mrs. Wilson has left Washington since her husband died, and the third time since he became ill, almost five years ago. During the winter illness, when she nursed the ex-president almost day and night, she was often urged to rest at some quiet out-of-town spot, but always refused save once, when she went to Massachusetts on a short visit. Once she went to New York to be a guest at a dinner of welcome to Lord Robert Cecil, who was here on a speaking tour in behalf of the league of nations. Since her husband died, she has been engaged in settling the estate in order, sending out acknowledgments to the thousands who sent messages of sympathy, and arranging the letters and memoranda left by Wilson, which are now being prepared for publication.

FAIR WEATHER TODAY

Cooler Temperatures Promised People of Atlanta.

Fair weather, with lower temperatures, is scheduled for Atlanta for today, according to Forecaster C. F. von Herrmann.

The mercury probably will not reach 50 degrees when Atlanta climbs out of bed today, but it will rise steadily during the day. Thursday the highest mark reached was about 65 degrees, with 58 degrees at 7 o'clock in the morning.

STRIKERS GO BACK

Unions at Buenos Aires Call Off Fight.

Buenos Aires, May 8.—All workers returned to their tasks today, following the action of the unions in calling off the general strike.

The strikers believe they have won the forcing the government to promise to modify the pension law. The future attitude of the workers will depend on whether or not the government carries out its promise.

Minor strikes still continue in the interior provinces of the republic, but it is believed that these will end shortly.

FLIPPER ADDRESSES A. M. E. CONFERENCE

Louisville, Ky., May 8.—(Special.) "The negro must stop so much complaining and grumbling and do something for himself," was the declaration made by Bishop J. S. Flipper, of Georgia, who presided over the fourth day's session of the African Methodist general conference here today.

Ira T. Bryant, secretary of the A. M. E. Sunday school union, reported, and advocated the establishment of a home for aged negro ministers.

The Episcopal committee was kept busy all day looking into the work of the bishops and it is expected that a report will be made by the committee Monday and the general conference will go into election Tuesday.

Dr. John Harmon, who is slated for the editorship of the Southern Christian Recorder, made a plea for the admission of women into the district, annual and general conferences.

R. H. Ward and W. B. Lawrence made short talks, representing the educational work in Georgia. Dr. Ward told about the great school building erected for negroes in Atlanta. He is secretary of the Episcopal committee.

Georgia delegation is advocating the return of Bishop J. S. Flipper for another quadrennium. President B. R. Holmes, of the Holmes institute of Atlanta, will deliver a series of addresses on the condition of the negroes of the south, and their advancement along educational and industrial lines.

the ideal mouthwash

Zonite used simply as a mouthwash or gargle does three distinct things.

(1) It destroys the breath odors arising from conditions in the mouth and leaves no odor of its own.

(2) It kills the germs responsible for dread pyorrhea and other gum diseases.

(3) It kills the germs that cause coughs, colds, sore-throat and other more serious respiratory diseases.

Zonite is absolutely non-poisonous. In bottles at your druggist's, fifty cents and one dollar.

RETAIL CREDIT MEN HEAR TALK BY JUDGE HOWARD

Judge G. H. Howard, of Fulton superior court, was principal speaker Thursday night at the semi-monthly meeting of the Associated Retail-Credit Men of Atlanta at the Daffodil Tea room. His subject was "Commercial Law and Its Application to the Credit Man."

An interesting entertainment program was followed by committee reports and a round table discussion of practical credit problems. Several new members were taken into the association. Third Vice President R. H. Penneck, of the Parks-Chambers-Hardwick company, presided.

"What's the Matter With Congress"

A TIMELY and interesting survey has been made by THE LITERARY DIGEST to ascertain public opinion of Congress. Prominent and representative men and women were asked for expressions and in this week's number of THE DIGEST, the replies, dozens of them, are presented.

Some idea of the range of opinion expressed is indicated by the following: Mr. Orin Lester of the Bowery Savings Bank, declares, "with such agencies at work in the country as Bolshevism and the present United States Congress, we have some job on our hands to maintain the integrity of the nation and the security of her institutions." At the other extreme, Captain Roscoe H. Johnson, International President of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, says: "Congress breaking down? Sure, from the view-point of Wall Street and its institutions which thrive on covered-up rottenness. Representative government breaking down? Not a bit of it. Folks back home are simply cleaning house." Some of the prominent persons, out of the many, who write their opinions, are:

E. H. Gary, United States Steel Corporation
John L. Lewis, President, United Mine Workers
Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War
Hudson Maxim, Inventor
Nicholas Murray Butler, President, Columbia University
Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus, Harvard University
Edward Prizer, President, Vacuum Oil Company

Judge 'Andy' Calhoun Enters His 73rd Year This Morning

Tells of Watching Growth of City From Time It Was Terminus to Metropolis of Today.

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Hale and hearty, with a mind that is a marvel of lucidity and a disposition unchangeable in its quiet display of human sympathy and understanding, Judge Andrew E. Calhoun, better known throughout Georgia and in fact the whole United States as "Judge Andy," enters this morning on his 73rd year. Having just accepted the nomination to preside for another four-year term over Atlanta's criminal court, he spoke with confidence of the years lying ahead in which he hopes to make a record insofar as tenure of office for judges is concerned.

Sitting in his armchair at the window of his office in the Fulton county court building, puffing away at a small, crooked pipe, the judge fell easily into a mood of reminiscence. His kindly eyes twinkled with mirth and merriment as he recalled some humorous incidents of the past, but the genial face clouded—yes, there was even a flash of defiance and determination—as he allowed his thoughts to dwell once again on the days of deep sorrow for the south, when with a realism that would have done credit to a much younger man, he recounted the struggles, struggles of blackened ashes and blasted hope.

Recalls Glory of Dixie.
But the somberness vanished as quickly as the keen mind of the septuagenarian leaped over whole decades and recalled the later glory of Dixie, which overshadowed in dazzling wealth its former condition.

This writer felt as by instinct that he stood in the presence of another generation. It was as if a breath from aristocratic foundations blew over the turmoil and whirl of a great modern city. Something in the manners of the judge brought a suggestion of chivalry so rarely encountered in modern life, gentleness combined with deep thought, culture that is not the superficial product of education, but inherent, profound and effortless. It is chiefly to his almost uncanny understanding of human nature, to his innate ability to place himself in the other man's place, that Judge Calhoun attracted nationwide attention while presiding for many years in Atlanta's recorder's court. He has never for a moment lost that gift, a gift which the great King Solomon preferred above riches and wealth, the splendor of wisdom.

Although never stepping beyond the iron barriers of the law, Judge Calhoun has proven himself to be a firm believer in that ancient saying, "The better the man, the better the law." It is the spirit of the law which guides him in his decisions. For the ultimate good which the law loves to protect has its interpreter, its guide, in Judge Calhoun.

To Reclaim, To Salvage.

The judge is of the opinion that it is not the desire of society to send some "young sinner" into penitentiary confinement in association with hardened criminals, that hope must never be abandoned to reclaim and salvage human lives, to lead them into new paths away from the haunts that would draw them ever downward. "I always try to get the viewpoint of the people who are brought before me. Once you have their viewpoint the rest is easy. I often find that there is no inborn criminal instinct, just a spirit of adventure and that is a different matter," he said.

And then followed reminiscences, stories that were treasures of human interest, pathos mixed with kindness, his reasonings with youthful offenders; catchy phrases, rich in meaning and valuable from the standpoint of psychological research. For in this matter of psychology the judge is no mere theorist, not one who tries to substantiate a previously conceived opinion by "leading the witness" as the lawyers phrase it, but a practical observer, one who understands the mysterious operation of the human mind, one who gets to the truth by a remarkable process of mental transmutation.

A Mine of Anecdotes.

A member of a family that has brought fame to the United States ever since the days of the Revolution, Judge Calhoun has stored up an immense pile of historical anecdotes and personal sidelights on great men and a host of observations on the various phases of modern history of which he has been a keen student.

His opinions and views on world affairs are not in the least antiquated. Yes, he even surprised his listeners, when he told of a change in his views on the League of Nations and the world court, a radical change, which showed his versatility of mind, his appreciation of the significance of world events, a change of opinion at a time in life when most men's mental faculties almost desperately in old channels.

"I saw this city grow from the time it was called Terminus. That was even before it had been given the name of Marietta," he said. "The Georgia Railway had a freight shed down here and that was the start of this marvelous city."

"It is hard to believe that a city should ever have grown on this spot, away from all water and with little basic resources in its neighborhood. What was the impetus which caused people to erect houses, build stores and start community life here?" he was asked.

John Calhoun's Prophecy.
Thoughtfully the judge puffed away at his pipe. His eyes narrowed and he seemed in deep meditation for a minute or so. Then he came back with a story, an incident which he recalled from his earliest youth.

"One day John C. Calhoun, vice president of the United States and an able statesman, came to visit my father, who lived at Newnan. He was my father's brother, 'Andrew,' he said to my father, 'why don't you buy yourself some land around that new terminal of the Georgia railway? That's going to be valuable property some day.'"

"My father asked him why he thought so. And my uncle who had made the trip from Washington in a carriage said: 'I notice that from that point downward there are a series of ridges running in all directions. They have brought one railway to that point. And the next hundred years will see a continued program of railway building. They will all come to that point. I tell you, my uncle continued, 'a hundred years from now there will be a city of half a million people on the spot where that freight shed now stands.'"

That was the judge's clear and illustrative explanation of the growth of the city of Atlanta. Incidentally it brought out a bit of historical prophecy as rare as it has become recently.

The Days of 60.

From the first growth of Atlanta his thoughts wandered to the civil war. He told of the antebellum days, of the grocers' manners, the serenity of the country, of the gentlemen fox-hunting and riding to inspect their plantations.

"What, all the leisure and erudition of the North American continent was in this section," he exclaimed. "And why should it not have been? We had the time to devote to learning. They had no time for it up north, they had to work hard to make a living and make a fortune. This section was wealthy without hard work."

"Slavery was all wrong though," mused Judge Calhoun. "It made us an indolent people. We did not make any great inventions and we were purely an agricultural people. There was no need to exert oneself, it all came too easy. With the abolition of slavery things changed. It made this country a great commercial asset. That's where the abolition of slavery becomes a blessing."

Compares Dixie-Belgium.

Judge Calhoun was a boy of ten years of age when the civil war broke out. Summing up his description of the march of Sherman to the sea, the burning of Atlanta and the desolation of the country side, he quoted that ancient passage from Tacitus on the depredations of the German invaders of the Roman empire: "They made a solitude and they called it peace."

His deep brown eyes burned with eloquence. There was no need to enlarge on the details. "You are a Belgian, you know what I mean," he said curtly.

Seventy-three years of active life. Thirty years to about that number as a judge, whose conception of duty is to do good. A man who has restored and rebuilt human lives and in that way has contributed to the progress of civilization. A man who believes in making citizens out of men and women who have started in the

BISHOPS TO MEET UPON UNIFICATION

Nashville, Tenn., May 8.—The Southern Methodist college of bishops this afternoon decided to meet in Nashville on May 20, at 10 o'clock in the morning, and decide the question of calling the special session of the general conference to consider unification with the Methodist Episcopal church.

The place for the special session of the Southern Methodist general conference, to be called by the bishops at their meeting on May 20, will be decided by the conference committee on receiving bids for the 1926 session of the general conference. Should the special session be called for the near future, the delegates to the last general conference at Hot Springs will compose the special session. Should the annual conferences have met in the meantime and elected delegates, such new delegates will compose it, it is stated.

LOUISIANA MAN DREW PLAN FOR UNIFICATION.

Shreveport, La., May 8.—A Louisiana layman, Horace White, attorney of Alexandria, drew up the basic plan under which the Northern Methodist Episcopal church has agreed to merge with the Southern Methodist church. It was disclosed today by Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Century college here, and a member of the southern general conference. The proposal was presented at the southern conference at Hot Springs several years ago for the first time. Mr. White's plan later was elaborated, but the basic principles, Dr. Sexton said, were those of his proposal.

DANIELS AND BROWN URGE UNIFICATION.

Raleigh, N. C., May 8.—Urging the Methodist Episcopal church, south, "heartily and cordially and promptly" join the Methodist Episcopal church, north, to form a unified Methodistism, Joseph Daniels, former secretary of the navy, and Joseph E. Brown, prominent banker of Raleigh and a delegate to the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, today telegraphed the college of bishops of the church, in session at Nashville, expressing the opinion that an overwhelming majority of the laymen desire the unification. Both men are prominent laymen of the church in Raleigh.

ALL OF CREW RESCUED FROM WRECKED VESSEL

Norfolk, Va., May 8.—The four most schooner R. R. Govin, of New York, went ashore during a thick fog early today about 14 miles north of Bodies Island, North Carolina, coast guard headquarters there was notified by the Kill Devil Hill station which rescued the crew.

The Govin's rudder is gone and she is filled with water as she lays on the beach, the surf beating over her. The Kill Devil Hill station reported. The coast guard cutter Manning was ordered to her relief but later was recalled when word was received here that the schooner is hard on shore and that the crew had been saved.

The vessel's plight was discovered soon after daybreak this morning by a lookout at the Kill Devil Hill station. The crew was taken off with surf gear.

The Govin is of 872 tons and was built at Lincolnton, N. C. She was in 1919. She plied between New York and Tampa, Fla., and was southbound when she ran aground.

wrong direction. One who remade men. What an dreadful record!

Recalls Masters of Old.

One cannot refrain from comparing Judge Calhoun with those masters of antiquity, the senators of Rome. They also combined a love for their native soil with a high conception of justice. History has immortalized their incorruptibility. On their record and their work a world system was built. Judge Calhoun, a pioneer Georgian, but also a perpetuator of an ancient and honorable system of law. The face of the world has been changed in his time. Old traditions have gone by the board. A new order has taken their place. But nobility of soul is the highest good that withstands the gnawing of the seas of ages. New times have new ideals, but that nobility persists despite all. It is recognized and revered also in our day. And that of Judge Calhoun is the bright and living evidence.

Dr. Butler Answers Attack On Papini by Mrs. Nelson

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, of New York, in a reply to a letter addressed to The Constitution by Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, member of the Atlanta board of education, defends the action of officers of his institution in inviting Signor Papini, author of "The Life of Christ," to lecture at the summer school of the university this year.

Mrs. Nelson wrote The Constitution, stating that Signor Papini is an undesirable character to lecture before Americans, declaring that his epithets "applied to Calvin, Luther, Zwingli, Huss and John Wesley are not decent."

Inasmuch as Mrs. Nelson's letter was largely controversial in nature, it was forwarded, with her consent, to Dr. Butler, and both letters are published herewith in full. Zwingli, Huss and John Wesley are not decent.

Dr. Butler states in his reply, incidentally, that Signor Papini was unable to accept the invitation to lecture at Columbia.

Several days ago The Constitution received the following communication from Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, of the Atlanta school commission:

Editor The Constitution: The "American Standard" states that Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, has invited Papini, an Italian, to lecture to students of that college.

Dr. Charles Fama and other Italians have rendered America good service in exposing the Italian race in its Italian literature. This Papini, they state, that his epithets applied to Luther, Zwingli, Huss and John Wesley, great founder of Methodism, are not decent.

This Papini considers Edison "undesirable," Longfellow "sickening" and George Washington "intolerable." Such is Dr. Butler's patriotism!

Dr. Butler has also at a public gathering proclaimed that the eighteenth amendment should be repealed. Yet this college president, who advocates breaking a great moral law, is the one to whom many of our southern teachers annually go for guidance. So far from deeming it essential for our teachers to attend Columbia university, I think Dr. Butler and his teachers could with great advantage come to Atlanta and imbibe some of the finer things of life from our Atlanta teachers.

We are hearing too much about technique and too little about more important matters. This writer is an American, who would be just to all sections of our great country. But New York City and other parts of the east are so stamped with the undesirable influence of Europe, that we had best avoid them.

Our slogan should be "southern schools for southern students."

I hope no teachers in the Atlanta public schools will attend Columbia college this summer.

MRS. J. O'KEEFE NELSON,
Atlanta School Commissioner.

The reply of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, is as follows:

Editor The Constitution: I have received and read with attention your kind letter of May 1 and its inclosures, and return herewith the letter addressed to The Constitution by Mrs. J. O'Keefe Nelson, member of the school commission board of Atlanta. This letter illustrates to the fullest extent the sort of thing which is now going on in the United States to the destruction of sound information and straight thinking.

Mrs. Nelson bases her letter upon statements taken from the American Standard, a paper of which I have never seen. When the American Standard got its information I do not know.

The facts in the case are that Signor Papini, who is just now a very prominent Italian man of letters and whose "Life of Christ" has had, and is having, in its English translation, a phenomenal circulation in the United States, was asked in the ordinary routine of university administration by the proper officers of the department of romance languages and literatures whether he would lecture on Italian literature at the coming summer session of Columbia university. Signor Papini was unable to accept the invitation and is not coming. Some disconnected sentences from sensational writings of his have been mentioned in the American press, but as I have never examined the writings in question, I do not know whether the alleged quotations are accurate or not.

The business of education was never more difficult than it is at this moment. Ignorance, prejudice and fanaticism stand in the way of turning the mind, whether old or young, to work for well-tested facts and then to reason correctly on the basis of these facts. A very large part of the more violent emotional reactions of our people have none but an imaginary basis.

Action in Game Crackers Dropped to Nashville Vols

Sinclair and Harry Payne Whitney, of New York, Albert Foreman, Chicago banker, and Frank Navin, owner of the Detroit American League Baseball club, are among those said to already have arranged to come here in private cars.

The battle started off like a great pitchers' contest that would be decided by a single score, and when the Crimson won the first game, 1-0, in their section of the fifth, the outlook was none too bright that the boys of the Petrels would repeat their performance in the afternoon.

But the Oglethorpe batters seemed only to be taking the bait and after the score in the fifth, returned to the mound to face the three runs in their attempts with the

The Petrels tallied again in their section of the seventh, three runs being the result of two hits, an error, and a walk. The marked ability to score from second on was the reason the pitcher has shown his worth to the Petrel cause by his ability to cover ground.

After his activities around the third and fourth innings, the crowd's applause. Wall also shared in the laurels of the winner, this little shortstop starting two of the fast double

The Crackers counted in the fourth when Niehoff walked and went to third on Brooks' hit, and later scored on Brock's sacrifice.

Two more came in the fifth when Zoellers led off with a double and scored on Paschal's triple. The Crackers came through with a single to score Paschal.

The eighth netted another. Krehmeyer, Brock and Muller singled in order. Zoellers popped to Murray and Hillis lifted a sacrifice to Lebo and Seventh Hole Halved.

Miss Paine's stroke on the seventh gave her a halve. Miss Mayer won the eighth with a par four, while Miss Paine's stroke counted on the ninth for a halve. Miss Paine was three down at the turn.

Miss Mayer shot par on five holes on the third side and turned in a card for a 42.

Miss Mayer won the 10th with a five. Miss Paine's stroke gave her the 11th hole and a halve.

Miss Paine's drive from the tee found the ditch and she holed out with a five, but lost the hole to Mayer.

The dog leg 13th was won by Miss Mayer.

TO SMEAR WALSH, DESIRE OF COAN

Washington, May 8.—The activities of Blair Coan, the republican national committee investigator, who went to Montana to inquire into the records of Senator Walsh, of the oil committee, and Senator Wheeler, of the Daugherty committee, were further described today in the senate Daugherty investigation.

A. A. Grorud, a Helena attorney, testified he had talked with Coan, in Montana, in April.

"Coan came to me and said he wanted something to smear Senator Walsh," Grorud said. "He asked me for affidavits. He said they had Wheeler where they wanted him and now they would get something on Walsh."

"I told Coan that I knew something about the Campbell case (on which Senator Wheeler's indictment was based) and that there was nothing they could convict Wheeler about in that. Coan said that was right, but that they would have the indictment to hold over Wheeler anyhow. Slattery, the United States district attorney, had not wished to bring the case before a grand jury even, Coan went on, but the department of justice had a charge against Slattery because he had been mixed up in some liquor charges and that made Slattery go through, anyway."

Burns Agent Helped.

Coan also said, the witness testified, that a Burns agent named McGraw was assisting him.

"Blair Coan told me the department of justice had 22 men in Montana," Grorud said. "Before 1916, Grorud said, as cross examination, he was a law partner of Senator Wheeler. He became a deputy attorney general later for the state of Montana."

E. G. Toomey, another Montana lawyer, told the committee he had encountered department of justice agents in the state, who said they were investigating actions of Slattery. The agents, notwithstanding, Toomey testified were out on "drinking parties" with "Higgins," who was said to be an assistant to Slattery.

The committee then returned to its inquiry into the affairs of Howard Manington. M. P. Kraffmiller, former associate of Howard Manington in Washington, produced a letter sent him February 26, 1922, by the latter from Columbus, refusing to give back any part of the money paid by Kraffmiller to Manington as fees for "legal services."

The witness said that Fred A. Caskey, also associated with Manington, had told him Will A. Orr, of New York, also was trying to get back money from Manington, and that Orr threatened to shoot up Jess Smith and Manington if he didn't pay it back.

Influence With Daugherty.

Paul Howland, attorney for H. M. Daugherty, asked Kraffmiller if "the payments you made to Manington were paid as bribes?"

"No sir," Kraffmiller said. "Wasn't this money paid by your clients because they knew Manington was close to the attorney general?" asked Chairman Brookhart.

"Well, we believed he had influence with the attorney general," Kraffmiller said. "It turned out frequently that with all the influence of Mr. Manington, yourself, and Fred A. Caskey," Howland asked, "you were unable to get liquor permits?"

"Yes sir."

"But Caskey got rich?" Chairman Brookhart put in.

"I can't say that, senator," Kraffmiller replied, laughing.

"Mr. Caskey is here," Howland interjected. "Why don't you get him?"

"Oh, we did," Chairman Brookhart replied, "but he refused to take our subpoena on his constitutional rights."

Mary Yeager, now employed in the alien property office, and formerly in the office of Attorney General Daugherty, then testified that she took dictation from Jess Smith, who "occupied an office on the sixth floor of the department of justice." She said she worked at Marion during the Harding campaign and was acquainted with Kraffmiller, William Halley, Thomas P. Feller, Alfred Urien and other persons named in the inquiry, she said, she also had met.

GUNMAN'S LINEUP BROKEN BY POLICE WHO SHOT TO KILL

Kansas City, Mo., May 8.—A man believed to be Peter P. Ghaslin, 27, of Pierpont, Mich., today was shot and killed by two policemen in the lobby of a hotel, while he strode into the lobby, leveled a revolver at the clerk and three guests, drew a Bible from his pocket and demanded the men help him find "that girl who lived here a year ago."

The policemen found the four men lined up against the wall with their hands in the air and Ghaslin seated in a chair facing them with his revolver. At sight of the police he fired three shots through plate glass windows. The police returned the fire and Ghaslin fell dead.

CRAWFORD IS ELECTED TO HEAD ALBANY "Y"

Mr. Parker succeeds R. B. Trev who has served three years as president of the local "Y."

Chairman of the standing committee of the Y. M. C. A. for the next year will be W. M. Pryse, religious work; W. W. Pace, Jr., educational; K. M. Dickson, membership; R. H. Ferrell, finance; D. L. Gibson, athletic; Cruger Westbrook, achievement. The six chairmen are an ex-officio executive committee of the board of directors.

FRENCH AVIATOR SETS NEW RECORD

Paris, May 8.—In a flight today the French aviator Lieutenant Bessout claims to have reached an altitude of 4,600 metres (15,088 feet) with a load of 2,000 kilograms (4,400 pounds), thus breaking the world record established October 23, 1923, by Lieutenant Harold G. Harris, the American flier, of 2,049 metres. (6,727 feet.) Lieutenant Bessout used a 600-horsepower French monomotor plane.

COOLIDGE DELEGATES TO CONTEST ALASKA

Juneau, Alaska, May 8.—Election results, by which it was announced adherents of President Coolidge had out generally in Alaska primary and municipal elections April 29, will be contested, according to indications. The ground of the fight will be that several hundred Indians, or native Alaskans, voted illegally.

Informal Dinner Honors Mrs. W. J. McKenna, of Boston

Mr. and Mrs. Cator Woolford entertained at dinner Thursday evening, at their home on Lullwater road, in compliment to Mrs. William Jay McKenna, of Boston, formerly Miss Isoline Campbell.

The elegantly appointed table was adorned in the center with a large silver bowl of garden flowers, in the pastel shades. Covers were placed for eight friends of the honor guest.

Mrs. Woolford wore a handsome black lace gown, and Mrs. McKenna was lovely in orchid crepe.

Another lovely party of Thursday, honoring Mrs. McKenna, was Mrs. Henry B. Tompkins' luncheon at the Biltmore hotel.

The luncheon table was adorned with a variety of summer flowers gracefully arranged in a French basket.

Mrs. Robert Troutman will entertain at a luncheon Saturday at the Druid Hills Golf club for Mrs. McKenna.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. Glenville Giddings will be hostess at a beautiful party to be given at her home Pine Bloom, in Druid Hills.

Miss Memminger Is Hostess at Tea.

Miss DeNeale McKenna, of Salisbury, N. C., who is the guest of Mrs. Caleb Maddox, was central figure at the tea at which Miss Julia Memminger entertained Thursday at her home on West North avenue.

The guests included Miss McKenna, Miss Mary Tuller, Miss Eleanor Gay, Miss Virginia Maude, Miss Etta May McWhorter, Mrs. Charles Woodard, Mrs. Caleb Maddox, Mrs. Lane, Miss Memminger and others.

Lovely Tea Honors Recent Bride On Thursday

Complimenting a charming bride of the late winter, Mrs. William Elliott Huger, Mrs. Bryan More Grant entertained on Thursday at an elaborate tea at her home on West Eleventh street. Mrs. Huger was formerly Miss Sarah Cobb Orme, and her wedding was one of the most brilliant events of the winter season.

Throughout the lower floor the decorations were a lovely combination of pink roses and purple iris. Long-stemmed Madame Caroline Testout roses filled vases, bowls and baskets. The tea table was covered with a cloth of imported lace and embroidery, and gracing the center was a tall silver vase filled with roses, purple iris and pink peonies. Silver compotes of pink, green and lavender mints alternated with silver candlesticks holding burning, pink tapers.

Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Huger received the guests in the library before the large fireplace which was banked with ferns and potted plants. Assisting in entertaining were: Mrs. A. J. Orme, Mrs. Wilmer Moore, Sr., Mrs. Shepard Bryan, Mrs. Marion Jackson, Mrs. Lawrence E. Grant, Mrs. Charles C. McGee and Mrs. Bates Block.

Mrs. Grant wore a model of green chiffon, trimmed with bands of fillet lace, and a corsage bouquet of pink roses.

Mrs. Huger's gown was of gold and brown lace, fashioned over gold cloth and finished with a grille of gold and brown. Completing her costume was a corsage of valley lilies and orchids.

During the afternoon 100 members of the young married set called.

Agnes Scott Girls To Give Recital.

A dramatic recital will be given in the chapel at Agnes Scott college at 8:15 o'clock Saturday evening, May 10, by advanced students of Miss Frances Gooch, head of the department of spoken English at Agnes Scott.

The program will consist of three plays, as follows: "Where But in America?" written by Oscar Wolff, which will be read by Miss Mary Ben Wright; "The String of the Sausages," by Rita Wellman, to be read and impersonated by Miss Mary Freeman, and Rachel Crothers' "What They Think," presented by Miss Frances Ames.

Three different phases of dramatic art are represented by the plays, and the development of character as interpreted by these talented young girls should prove very interesting. The friends of Agnes Scott are invited to be present.

Wednesday Mrs. Joseph H. Hines will compliment Mrs. Franklin at luncheon at her home in Brookwood Hills.

Mrs. Frank Lowe will entertain at luncheon Thursday at her home on Semihole avenue, in honor of Mrs. Franklin.

Mrs. Franklin will be central figure at a bridge-ten Thursday afternoon, May 16, at which Mrs. Ware McRoberts will entertain.

Girl Scouts To Assist At Children's Carnival.

Increased activities in the Girl Scouts' middle name. There are so many occasions when she may be useful, so many calls made upon her time, but every occasion when she may be of service is considered a great privilege and every call upon her for help of any kind is considered a great compliment.

The Girl Scouts will assist at the Agnes Scott Children's carnival which will be held in Druid Hills today at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Clyde L. King.

This will be a very beautiful occasion and a most interesting one. The Scouts are proud of their share in assisting.

Bride-Elect Is Guest of Honor.

Miss Mary Hancock, a lovely bride-elect, continues to be honor guest at a round of informal social affairs.

Mrs. J. C. Gordon entertained at a matinee party at the Atlanta theater Thursday evening when Mrs. Hancock was invited to meet Miss Hancock.

Miss Margaret Hancock will be hostess at a bridge tea on next Tuesday at her home in West End.

On Wednesday Miss Dorothy Matthews will give a bridge tea at the East Lake club.

Mrs. William G. King will compliment Miss Hancock with a bridge tea Thursday at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Mrs. A. C. Miller, Jr., Miss Ida Mae James and Miss Constance Philip will be among others entertaining for this popular bride-elect.

Why Have Gray Hair?

No need at all to have even a trace of grayness, since Science has given us the clean, colorless liquid known as Kolor-Bak, which is a true substitute for the natural pigmentation. Kolor-Bak quickly restores any gray hair to its original color. The one clean, colorless liquid, as easy to apply as water, is for all shades. It is amazing to see how quickly the former color returns. No dyed or streaky look, but the natural, uniform shade throughout.

"My Hair Was Quite Gray" "Only a short time ago my hair was quite gray and becoming grayer. It was falling out. My scalp itched and dandruff appeared. Only a few applications of Kolor-Bak stopped the itching and dandruff. My hair soon stopped coming out. Most wonderful of all, however, is that my hair is again its original color. I look like a younger girl." (A Typical Letter)

You pay nothing for Kolor-Bak if results are not satisfactory. Ask your dealer. Made by Hygienic Laboratories, Chicago, Illinois.

Mrs. Calhoun Acts As Hostess For Mrs. Charles Dana

One of the loveliest parties given in compliment to Mrs. Charles Dana, of New York, during her visit to her sister, Mrs. Hunter Perry, was the mah jong party at which Mrs. Andrew Calhoun entertained Thursday at her handsome new home on Paces Ferry road.

The decorations throughout the beautiful rooms where the guests were received consisted of a variety of summer flowers cut from the handsome gardens of the hostess.

The prizes for the honor guest and high and low score were bottles of French perfume. Following the game tea was served at the small tables.

Invited to meet Mrs. Dana were Mrs. Perry, Mrs. Frank Adair and her guest, Mrs. Addison Palmer, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun, Mrs. Frank Fleming, Mrs. Roy Childs, Mrs. Edwin Johnson, Mrs. Rufus Dorsey, Mrs. Jesse Draper, Mrs. Cobb Caldwell and Miss Nellie Hightower.

HEARING FOR BENNARD IS SET FOR OCTOBER

Following filing of a bill of exceptions Thursday in the appeal of the case of J. M. Bennard, former Gwinnett county deputy sheriff, who was found guilty in U. S. court recently of conspiring to violate the national prohibition law, hearing was set for the October meeting of the district court of appeals. Bennard was tried jointly with Sheriff E. S. Garner and his son, Howard, both of whom were acquitted.

Unique games will be played and music will be rendered by the Emory band and the Boys' High School orchestra.

A beautiful feature of the afternoon will be the artistic may-pole dances by a group of young girls from Agnes Scott college.

Popcorn, lemonade, ice cream, candy and balloon booths will add to the merriment of the occasion.

An invitation is extended to all children of the city to attend the carnival. Mothers are urged to send or bring their children and assist the members of the club in making the affair a happy and successful one.

Admission to the grounds will be 10 cents a person and 5 cents admission to each side show.

FRANCE TO INTENSIFY COTTON PRODUCTION

Paris, May 8.—France must adopt a policy of intensifying cotton production in her colonies in order to offset the predicted reduction in American cotton exports, Minister of the Colonies Jean Fabry declared today in an address at the Colonial school.

"The United States," he said, "will not perhaps always be able to assure our textile industry the tonnage of raw material needed. Our textile manufacturers demand that we intensify production."

French Countess Addresses Alliance Francaise Members

At the meeting of the Alliance Francaise Thursday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Loris, on Fifteenth street, an interesting talk was given by the Countess Constance Hilyer de Caen, of Paris, France.

She is a charming woman, possessing a magnetic personality and speaks English fluently. In her talk she brought France nearer to the hearts of her hearers, especially to the French-speaking Americans. Countess de Caen told of work being done by the French mothers in decorating the graves of the American soldiers who are buried in France. The Countess de Caen is spending some time in Atlanta, where she is renewing friendships made during the war when she worked in the camps in France where American soldiers were stationed. She was affectionately called "Little French Mother" by the American soldiers.

Another interesting feature of the program of the meeting Thursday was the reading of the play "Le Poupillon," a French comedy in one act, written by Paul Bilhaud and Jules Truffier and read by the president, Charles Loris, and the vice presidents, Mrs. John Marshall Slaton and Mrs. Walter Wellborn.

Resolutions were passed on the death of a beloved and brilliant member of the alliance, Miss America V. Woodberry.

A group of French songs were sung by Miss Natalie Hammond, Miss Nela Wellborn and Mrs. Joe Brown.

Mademoiselle Laure Lenoir, who has just recently come to make her home in America, gave some examples of French newspaper humor, taken from "Le Journal de Paris."

Following the meeting the members of the alliance were entertained at tea by Mr. and Mrs. Loris.

The hostess wore a beautiful gown of French blue crepe fashioned over flesh-colored satin. The membership of the Alliance Francaise is composed of a group of prominent French-speaking Atlantans and the meetings of the organization are delightful weekly social and cultural affairs.

Atlanta P.-T. A. Council Joins State Organization

The outstanding feature of the meeting of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher council Thursday afternoon, at the Carnegie library was the unanimous vote of the local council to join the Georgia state P.-T. A. The motion was made by Mrs. E. D. McDonald, president of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council and seconded by Mrs. R. F. McCormack. The chair was occupied by Mrs. Paul Beavers, secretary of the council, while Mrs. McDonald made the motion.

In a brief and concise manner, Mrs. McDonald related the benefits to be derived from the affiliation with the state P.-T. A. also, outlining the effectiveness of P.-T. A. work in general by being a part of the state organization. A number of constructive activities have been accomplished during the past year under the direction of Mrs. McDonald. It is a fitting climax to her administration that she should be largely instrumental in helping to bring about the connection of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council with the state. Mrs. J. E. Andrews and Mrs. George Howson, who hold offices in the state organization, expressed their joy in having the council affiliate with the state and also gave excellent reasons for the affiliation. Another interesting feature of the meeting was the informal reports of representatives from the junior high schools, each giving a short account of the work being accomplished by the individual parent-teacher associations of these schools. Mrs. R. F. McCormack, as a representative of the Girls' High P.-T. A., told of the splendid work being undertaken by that association. Especially interested were the members present in hearing of the student aid fund, recently founded by the Girls' High P.-T. A.

Mrs. J. D. Evans spoke of the Opportunity school. The members were enthusiastic in their support to retain this school in Atlanta. Unanimous vote was made to instruct the secretary to write a letter to the board of education to prevent the abolishment of this worthy school.

On recommendation of the president, the secretary was also instructed to write a letter to the Atlanta safety council pledging the support of the P.-T. A. council in assisting in the work of preventing fatalities. Mrs. J. C. Malone, president of the Samuel Inman P.-T. A., presented a motion for the meetings of the P.-T. A. council to be held once each month, instead of every other month, and that a change be made in the time of the meeting. It was decided to hold the meetings at 10 o'clock in the morning the first Thursday in the month.

The report of nominating committee and annual election of officers will take place at the next meeting.

URGE TWO BE HELD IN ASKEW'S DEATH

Recommendations that J. E. Chandler, 29, of 267 Wesleyan avenue, be held to the grand jury under a charge of murder, in connection with the fatal stabbing last Sunday of Harry Askew, 652 South Pryor street, and that E. J. Maddox, 770 Ormond street, in whose machine the row between Askew and Chandler is said to have started, be held as a material witness, were made Thursday by the coroner's jury.

Maddox stated that the fight took place on the ground, following an argument in his auto as to whether or not Askew had knocked off Chandler's hat. Maddox said he did not see the stabbing, but that Askew got back in the auto and complained of being cut, asking to be carried to a hospital. He was carried to the Atlanta hospital, where he died early Tuesday.

DR. MILLAN SPEAKER AT MEN'S LEAGUE MEET

Dr. Homer McMillan delivered the principal address Thursday night at the regular meeting of the Men's Service League of the Westminster Presbyterian church. Following a supper in the church parlors, a musical program was presented, featuring piano selections by Miss Minnie Lee Cook, and music by the Georgia Railway & Power company quartet.

Daughters of Confederacy Announce Medal Winners in Essay Contest

Prizes, as announced in Thursday's Constitution, were awarded winners in the United Daughters of the Confederacy essay contest at 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the United Daughters of the Confederacy chapter house, Juniper and Sixth streets. Miss Kathleen Mitchell, chairman, made the awards, and appropriate exercises followed.

The winners are shown in the above picture, as follows: Bottom row, left to right, Fort Scott Meador, Sarah Bowman, Hazel Hughes, Maryanne Dooly, Shirley Hurst, Margaret Ashton, Margaret Cramer, Irene Gorman. Second row, J. L. Riley, Leona Bedford, Marie Hildebrand, Miriam Alsop, Louise Powell, Bertha Rosen, Pritford Gayle, Quido Sanders, Hoy Head. Top row, Joseph Brown, Arthur Harris, Gussie Dunbar, Floyd Cooper, Jane Dillon, Elizabeth Smith, Virginia Risk.

"A sprightly foot is a difficult thing to hold within a fine stocking. It is constantly seeking to escape."

An ad for hosiery that starts in such intriguing fashion more than ever convinces us that modern America discovered the science of advertising and all the rest of the world and all times before us were in the piker class.

Then we get a jolt when we pick up a copy of Balzac's "Psychology of Marriage." Balzac was not an American, nor were his publishers, and yet away back in his literary time he inserted an introductory paragraph, urging women, if they valued their peace of mind, not to read this volume.

The scheme is trite, but still sure fire as a best selling method.

To think, too, that our modern sex-surrenderers—our Lawrence and Georges and Athertons and the rest—tout themselves as pioneers in the literature of psycho-analysis when the great Frenchman had almost exhausted the field, before Freud and his followers reduced the process to a mere materialistic, reductionism, with types limited to the sub or abnormal. Their purpose the mere fetid pleasure such as lies in the sight and smell of.

Balzac wielded a wicked knife, but it was not the butcher's. It was the surgeon's laying open an evil condition, not to gloat over it but to discover its eating in on life. To make the danger supply the warning.

There was this greater difference, too.

Balzac was a simple soul. He still believed in that very thing—the soul, and his analyses dealt with the growth of it with what it feeds on, as with its shrinkage when only the physical appetites are gratified.

The analysts of today prefer to dig rather than to soar. Thus a literature which we have just heard a woman call apily call animal.

We talk, too, of our publicity process. But consider this:

The recent tour of Eleanor Duse was heralded by the redoubtable Morrist Grest, and her first night's appearance in New York netted $20,000.

A few weeks later—May 1, to be exact—in the ancient city of Milan, Italy, the premiere of Botta's "No. 1" was presented before a $50,000 house. People paid $50 at the box office for a single seat, $300 to speculators.

How come, Mr. Grest?

An innocent stranger to large cities asks if there is a law compelling all the women to wear these nude stockings.

No. It is just their way of telling the world that they carry their money now just as the men do.

Also, many women no longer count on their fingers.

Another item of feminine charm is thus junked with last year's war vessels and last month's slang.

The women no longer count on their fingers. But listen to this—it is a head of big business who is speaking, a manufacturer who has a large office organization:

"I am as rapidly as possible filling with women the confidential positions in my office, those of money responsibility and those that require careful research work."

"I have found from long experience that women can best be trusted in each of these ways. They don't talk. They don't discuss our business on the outside. They are absolutely trustworthy in the handling of money. They are willing to take infinite pains.

"I have discussed this with other business men of my city—one of the largest in the middle west—and an astonishing number of them are following the same policy."

"But—there is one place where I draw the line in the employment of women."

"It is my unalterable conviction that a married woman cannot remain in business and attend to the more important calling."

"A home and children."

"That is the first consideration in married life for any woman."

"If I put the temptation in her way to neglect this paramount duty for the sake of a larger family income, then I am partly responsible for what I consider one of the most dangerous conditions threatening the social stability of our country today."

"A shameful capitulation of moral standard to economic expediency."

Discussion of presidential possibilities brought about the subject of political machines, and one in particular, which dictates in municipal, state and even in national elections focussed the conversational line.

It was a member of the opposite political party who said:

"For my part, I think that this particular machine is a great benefactor to its home town."

"Under machine rule, when a street improvement program is to be launched, for instance, with a $5,000,000 appropriation to cover it, the machine very frankly takes two millions and a half, but the other two and a half is absolutely devoted to the improvements of the streets."

"On the other hand, when the other party is in power, graft is rampant, and the city is lucky if the streets get a million out of the five."

"Therefore, say I, why pick on machine rule?"

It was an auto tourist, accustomed to sleep wherever Lizzie lands him at dark, who said:

"Some beds are meant to encourage sleep. Others merely test endurance."

Tax Collections $100,000 Higher Than Last Year

City taxpayers have paid into the city treasury $100,000 more up to date this year than was received in 1923, it was revealed Thursday by Tax Collector Marvin P. Roane, and the record deluge of money into the treasury is gaining strength every day.

Nearly $250,000 had been paid at the close of the window Thursday while $149,800 had been paid on the same date last year. Collections for Thursday alone were $49,220 as compared to $26,152 on May 8, 1923.

The city's fiscal condition this year was better on May 1 by more than $200,000 than it was last year but nearly $800,000 in short-time notes must be met out of tax collections between May 1 and May 15. Comptroller B. Graham West has estimated that collections of $1,500,000 during the period, six times as much as collected to date, will be necessary to carry the city safely until the next tax installment falls due in July.

Fish Dealers Form Body To Protect Georgia Industries

Brunswick, Ga., May 8.—At a meeting held here today, attended by many prawn and shrimp dealers on the Georgia coast, and by members of the legislative committee on fish and game, an organization was formed to be known as the Prawn and Fish Dealers' association of Georgia. The following officers were elected for the year:

President, C. A. Taylor, Brunswick; vice-president, H. C. Lowden, Savannah; secretary and treasurer, W. E. Yeatman, Brunswick, and directors, C. A. Taylor, H. C. Lowden, W. E. Yeatman, H. G. Wood, C. P. Goodyear.

It is the intention of the new organization to at once apply for a charter and the purpose of the association will be for a better protection of fish and oysters along the Georgia coast, which, it was pointed out, had been badly neglected in recent years. Matters in connection with new legislation for the sea food was discussed and it is likely that a new bill will be presented at the next meeting of the general assembly.

B. F. Mann, representative from Glynn county, addressed the meeting. State Game and Fish Commissioner Peter S. Twitty also was among those present.

Atlanta Girl Receives High Honor From Library Commission

It will be of cordial interest to the countless friends of Miss Frances Powell, popular Atlanta society belle, to learn that she has received the appointment of assistant secretary of the Georgia library commission. She was appointed by the members of the commission, who are Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Miss Tammie Dora Barker, Mrs. Maude Barker Cobb, Mr. Mason, of Hartwell, Ga., and Mrs. J. H. Mills, of Jenkinsburg, Ga.

The appointment came to Miss Powell as the result of her excellent qualifications in being splendidly equipped for the position both in training and personality. She has prepared herself seriously for library work, having graduated from Wellesley college in Massachusetts, where she received her academic training. The latter part of this month she will be awarded a certificate from the Atlanta library school where she has pursued the technical course for the past year in library work. Before entering Wellesley college, Miss Powell attended Washington university and the Atlanta Girls' High school, where high honors were accorded her in her literary undertakings at that time.

Miss Powell is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Arthur G. Powell, representative Atlantans, well-known in the civic and social life of the city. She is a young woman of charming personality and brilliant intellect. She was a popular member of the Debutante club of 1921-1922, and is an active member of the Junior League, taking a special interest in the many worthy charities assisted by this organization.

APPEALS FOR PAROLES AND PARDONS HEARD

Hearings on numerous parole and pardon petitions were held Thursday before the Georgia prison commission. No decisions, however, were announced by the commission, each case being taken under advisement for further study.

Among the pleas were two from Fulton county, one from Claude Thomas, serving a sentence after conviction on a charge of stabbing and larceny, and the other from L. G. Lamney, convicted of burglary. Both ask parole.

Other cases considered included that of Bernard Krauer, of Bibb county, charged with larceny after trust, who asks parole. He was represented at the hearing by J. F. Stroacher.

J. C. Grant, of Hall county, asks for pardon. He is serving a life sentence on a conviction for murder, but recently discovered evidence, it is stated, seems to create a doubt as to his guilt, since three men were shooting at the time of the killing.

James M. Cason, of Wilcox county, convicted of murder, asks parole. Art Davis, serving a term for burglary, also asks parole. He was sent up from Coffee county.

No evening services will be held in Episcopal churches of Atlanta Sunday due to the fact that the annual diocesan council of the diocese of Atlanta convenes in Macon with a mass meeting Sunday night. The council will last through Wednesday.

How to Look Years Less Than Your Age

The most aged face will look years younger after the use of ordinary mercurized wax for a week or so. This remarkable substance, because of its peculiar absorptive power, actually removes the thin veil of faded or withered outer cuticle, a little at a time. Gradually the fresher, more youthful skin underneath is revealed. This absorption process being a purely hygienic one, entirely natural complexion is acquired—quite different from an artificial complexion, which appears anything but girlish, though often bearing painful evidence of childlessness. An ounce of mercurized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is sufficient to rejuvenate any complexion. It is put on like cream at bedtime, and washed off mornings.—(adv.)

Domestic Heroines in Our Homes

Women who lead a domestic life seem to listen to every call of duty excepting the supreme one that tells them to guard their health. As long as they can drag themselves around women continue to work. Necessity to keep on their feet all day when over-tired, or sitting in cramped positions day in and day out often brings on ailments from which women suffer tortures. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been strengthening women and overcoming such ailments. Sickness and pain vanish under its influence and thousands of women have been benefited by it.—(adv.)

EXPRESSION RECITAL FOR OAKHURST SCHOOL

A music and expression recital will be given Friday night at 8 o'clock at the auditorium of the Oakhurst school, sponsored by the woman's auxiliary of Oakhurst Presbyterian church.

The program has been directed by Miss Campbell, former teacher of expression at Cox college. A number of well-known musicians and readers will be on the program, and feature numbers will be a minuet and Chinese drill by a group of little girls who have been rehearsing for several weeks.

ORCHESTRA TO PLAY FOR CRIPPLED TOTS

The Marietta concert orchestra will give a concert Sunday for the children and nurses at the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, on East Lake drive.

The orchestra numbers more than 30 talented musicians, among them being four Shriners, all members of Yaarah Temple, and it was through the influence of these nobles that the concert was arranged.

Attractive Shoes for Comfortable Walks

Good circulation is essential to Health. When your feet are bound in stiff, incorrectly built shoes, general circulation is hampered. Comfortable Cantilevers are constructed so that the 26 small bones and muscles of the foot function properly. The flexible arch of the shoe when laced is drawn up to gently support the foot arch.

In repose or in action the foot arch is comfortably supported. The flexibility of the Cantilever arch while supporting acts in harmony with every arch movement of the foot. This is an ideal support for your foot arch—no slipping or rubbing or bulky annoyance. The exercise permitted by flexibility of the shoe strengthens the foot muscles and encourages beautiful circulation. There are many styles of Cantilevers all with their good health-giving qualities—fine leathers and graceful models.

Mrs. V. H. Kreighshaber Explains Value of Better Homes Exhibit

BY MRS. V. H. KREIGHSHABER, Past President of the Young Woman's Hebrew Association.

The value of a better home exhibit to the community is manifold. There has been a steady development in the last 2 or 3 decades in the designing and construction of moderately priced homes. It is but natural that the inventive genius of the American architect and builder would have wonderful opportunities for development in this direction.

Comfort, sanitation and design, plus the economical cost of such residential homes, have been the subject of a great deal of careful thought and consideration. It is the object of the "Better Homes Exhibit" which is conducted during the week of May 11 to 18 throughout the entire United States to bring these facts forcefully to the attention of the American people. Whether you now own your own home, or whether you intend shortly to build or buy one, it will not only be interesting, but instructive to visit during that week the residences that will be thrown open to the public.

Care has been given not only in selecting the buildings, but also in furnishing and detail equipment, and it will be a treat to visit them.

These residences are located at 212 Virginia avenue, 281 Dill avenue (end of Stewart avenue car line) while the colored demonstration home is at 45 B street.

They are open to the public from 2:30 to 6 o'clock and from 7:30 to 10 o'clock.

BOY TRUCK VICTIM IS LAID TO REST

Burial of 10-year-old Foster Tinsley, victim of a motor truck on Roswell road Wednesday afternoon, took place Thursday afternoon in the churchyard of Mount Perin Baptist church, following funeral services held in the church at 3 o'clock. Harry G. Poole was in charge.

In addition to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Tinsley, he is survived by four brothers and two sisters.

The truck that killed the youth was operated by Oscar Adams, of Center street, who was placed under $1,000 bond by county police under a charge of reckless driving. Adams said the boy darted suddenly into the road in front of his truck to get his cap, which a companion had thrown across the road.

DAILY CALENDAR OF WOMEN'S MEETINGS

Circle No. 9 will meet at Trinity church in the Sunday school room at 3 p. m. today, Mrs. Hartsock, chairman.

The Half-Time Wife

BY VIOLET DARE

CHAPTER XXXV. Duncan Hale's Interference.

Geoffrey's political activities took up much of his time; a city election in which he was much interested was impending, and his own candidacy for governor of the state was becoming an assured thing. He threw himself into his work the next few days with renewed zest, and Suzanne rejoiced, knowing that it was because of her decision to believe blindly in him and ask him no more questions about his relations with Linda Vale. Her curiosity was as sharp as ever; she could not govern that Mrs. Vale gave no sign of being disturbed; evidently after the party at the club were stopping over in the city for a few hours on their way to their country home, Geoffrey had come and waited for him in the small outer office of his suite. There Mrs. Vale found her.

"Oh, I'm so glad to have a chat with you," she exclaimed, seating herself on the small divan beside Suzanne. "I have your checks here, for your own allowance and the house—don't suppose you need see them?"

"You see, Dick has two nurses, even though he's nearly well, and then too, Lolita is there."

"The dear child," sighed Linda Vale, her handkerchief to her eyes. Suzanne smiled. It seemed odd that Mrs. Vale should suddenly be so fond of the daughter she had left to shift for herself until she made a good marriage. "It's dreadful to have one's only daughter marry, and so young. I do hope Dick will be good to her."

"Oh, Dick's sure to be," Suzanne retorted, trying to emphasize the first word. "Thank you so much for having these checks ready promptly, Mrs. Vale."

"I try always to be prompt," replied Mrs. Vale, quite as if it had not been her habit to delay them. "And I do want to speak to you about one other thing, Suzanne; you're young and inexperienced, and don't know so very much about your husband's affairs, of course, so you'll forgive me for being frank with you. Don't you think you're rather extravagant? Just now, when Geoff is preparing for this big campaign, you ought to be careful."

Suzanne's anger flamed up, hard as she tried to control it. "Really, Mrs. Vale, until Geoff himself suggests that I change my mode of living, I see no reason for your interference," she exclaimed, rising.

"Oh, my dear, you're so impetuous, so quick to take offense," sighed Mrs. Vale, lifting her eyes to Geoffrey, who had come into the room by the door behind Suzanne. "I'm sure that meant my advice only for your husband's good."

She left the room hastily; turning, Suzanne faced her husband. "Geoff, dear, did you hear what that woman said?" she exclaimed. "If you want me to be economical, won't you tell me so, instead of leaving me to find out from her?"

"Good heavens, who wants you to practise economy?" he demanded, as he kissed her. "I don't. Has Linda been making you miserable?"

"Trying to," she answered cheerfully. "Oh, Geoffrey," she paused, but he knew what she meant to say, and abruptly suggested that they go into his private office. If only he could explain to her!

That evening at a dance at the Merrimans' Duncan Hale spoke to Suzanne about her husband's secretary.

"I've been thinking about you, all the time I've been quarantined in your house," he announced. "And now that I'm out—oh yes, I left this afternoon, got special permission from the authorities—I've got to tell you what I think."

"I don't want to hear it," she answered sharply. "Geoff and I are getting along beautifully, if other people would just let us alone."

"But Suzanne, you so foolish," he exclaimed. "If I could tell you the things I know you'd sing a different tune. You've got to listen to me now! Don't run away," as she turned from him.

"I don't want to know anything but what my husband chooses to tell me," she insisted.

"And if he never chooses to tell you anything?"

"That won't make any difference. Geoff knows what he's doing."

"All right—go on, and let him and Linda make a perfect fool of you," he exclaimed angrily. "You know that I love you; that's why I'm trying to make you see this situation as it really is. He and she—"

"I won't listen!" cried Suzanne, snatching her hand from his restraining grasp and running into the ballroom.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Tightly Covered. Tea and coffee should always be kept in airtight jars or containers so they will not lose their strength.

Black Clothes. Black cloth garments will clean beautifully, if clear black coffee containing a few drops of ammonia is used.

Paint It. There are many good dyes on the market that will brighten up that faded, but otherwise good straw hat. All for the sum of 25 cents, too.

The Dress for the Little Girl. The dress for the three-year-old daughter is very dainty when decorated with collar and cuffs of linen with pulled threads and little roses, such as used on the popular handkerchiefs, embroidered every here and there.

Thoughtful Packing. It is not easy for the mother to pack for a family of babies when contemplating a trip. One woman packs a small trunk with things that will be needed for the first day and sends that on ahead. Then that dreadful worry as to the arrival of baggage is avoided and a change for each member of the family is assured.

GEORGIA STUDENTS URGED TO ENTER POLITICAL ARENA

Athens, Ga., May 8.—(Special.)—Students at the University of Georgia were urged to "go into politics" to aid in eradication of destructive elements in Georgia politics by members of the legislative committee on the university and its branches, which was in Athens this week.

The committee, composed of Freeman C. McClure, Walker, chairman; Roy Harris, Jefferson, vice chairman; Frank Holden, Clarke; Lee J. Langley, Floyd; A. J. Jones Meriwether; L. R. Pitts, Gordon; Hugh Patterson, Montgomery; J. B. Wilson, Walton, left Wednesday morning for their homes after spending three days here inspecting the university and branches.

At the general assembly in the university chapel Tuesday the legislators spoke of disrupting elements in the Georgia legislature which fight progress of the state by refusing to aid in reform of its tax laws and prevent larger appropriations for its educational institutions.

Lee J. Langley, of Floyd county, declared that he will introduce a bill next month providing for division of the state into zones and election of only 100 members to the lower house. He said his system would attract more capable men to the legislature.

DeKalb Schools Clash In County Contests On Emory Field Today

Decatur, Ga., May 8.—(Special.)—DeKalb county schools will be closed Friday and students and teachers will assemble at Emory university for the annual field day and literary competitions. It was announced today by Superintendent of Schools R. E. Carroll. Members of the faculty of Emory and Oglethorpe universities and Agnes Scott college will act as judges. A special feature of the morning program will be selections by the Emory University glee club and orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey. Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory, will welcome DeKalb schools at the opening exercises at Emory chapel at 9:30 o'clock.

Athletic events will be held at the university athletic field in the afternoon, while morning sessions will be devoted to literary contests. Several hundred visitors are expected.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Powell Observe Sixty-Third Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Powell Wednesday celebrated their 63rd wedding anniversary at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Ida B. Higgins, of 195 Whitehall street. The aged couple spent the day quietly, but flowers and other gifts sent by friends made the anniversary a particularly happy one.

Mr. Powell, a native of England, came to the United States when 14 years old, settling with his father in Birmingham. Mrs. Powell, who before her marriage was Miss Alma Marshall, is a native of Shelbyville, Tenn., and it was at her home that the wedding was held a few months after the opening of the Civil war in 1861.

Mr. Powell will be 91 years old in June, and his wife 80 in September.

DETECTIVES PROBING TWO HOUSE ROBBERIES

Detectives Thursday investigated robbery of two residences that occurred early Thursday morning. One of the homes entered was the residence of Norman Evans, secretary and treasurer of the Fulton Bag & Cotton Mill, 64 Fairview road. The other was the residence of Isadore G. Mervay, 289 St. Charles avenue.

Entrance was gained by "bumming" windows. Only small loot was obtained, the thieves apparently having been frightened away at both homes.

LOCAL DRUGGISTS WILL HELP RAISE $1,000,000 FUND

Announcement has just been made of appointment of eleven Atlantans, all prominent in city and state pharmaceutical circles, as members of the headquarters building campaign committee of the American Pharmaceutical association.

The committee was organized to raise a $1,000,000 fund to erect a building which will provide permanent headquarters for the association, and plans include space for offices, facilities for publication purposes, laboratories, a museum and library. Location of the building will be decided later.

Atlanta named are: R. C. Hood, president of the Southern College of Pharmacy; Dr. Joseph Jacobs, president of the Georgia Pharmaceutical company; Dr. L. W. Fort, manager Lamar & Rabin Drug Co.; T. C. Marshall, of Marshall & Pendergast Co.; J. T. Seiman, of the Seiman Drug company; Sinclair Jacobs, vice president of the Jacobs' Pharmacy company; Paul Fleming, president of J. B. Daniel, Inc.; and Dr. T. A. Cheatham, state drug inspector.

MASONS' MEET CLOSES 32d Degree Initiation Set for Tonight

The third day of the 29th general convocation of Scottish Rite bodies of Atlanta advanced the class of over 100 members from the 19th to the 31st degree, sessions having begun at 9 o'clock Thursday morning and continued throughout the day and evening, with interruptions only for lunch at noon, and dinner in the evening. The latter was served in the banquet hall at 7 o'clock.

The convocation will close tonight when the 32nd degree is conferred and members of the class made master of the royal secret. The class will assemble at Masonic Temple at 1 o'clock today and visit the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, where it will be photographed, after which all will return to the temple and perfect the class organization.

The first section of the 32nd degree will be conferred at 5:45 o'clock and dinner will be served at 7 o'clock tonight, following which the degree will be completed.

G. H. S. Alumnae Announces Scholarship Chairmen

A scholarship is given each year by Agnes Scott to the Alumnae association of the Girls' High school, which the association awards to the girl selected by the faculty as qualifying to be a scholarship girl.

This year the girls contesting for the scholarship are: Myrtle Bledsoe, Anna Knight and Sara White. All three of these girls have made splendid records at the high school. The one receiving the highest number of votes cast by the members of the Alumnae association will be given the scholarship to Agnes Scott.

The voting upon these names will take place from four to six on the afternoon of Wednesday, May 14, at an afternoon reception to be given at the home of Mrs. E. D. McDonald.

The Atlanta Woman's club. All members of the Alumnae association are invited to attend, and likewise, all past students of the Girls' High school are invited and urged to become members of the association.

The officers of the association are as follows: Mrs. Charles T. Pottenger, president; Miss Mattie Slaton, vice president; Mrs. William F. Slaton, treasurer; Mrs. E. D. McDonald, secretary, and Miss Luile Sargent, assistant secretary.

The board of directors includes Miss Jessie Muse, Mrs. E. V. Carter, Jr., Mrs. Edward Joiner, Mrs. Howard Smith, Mrs. Joseph N. Moody, Mrs. S. W. McCallie, Mrs. David Fitchner, Miss Emma Gregg and Miss Mary C. Moore.

Theta Kappa Omega Chapters Give Dance at Brookhaven

A prominent social event of Thursday evening assembling several hundred members of the college set, was the annual dance at Brookhaven, given by the Chi and Epsilon chapters of the Theta Kappa Omega fraternity of Tech High and University school.

The ballroom was artistically decorated with quantities of spring foliage and shrubs, banking the side walls and corners of the spacious room. The ceiling was hung with smilax and graceful streamers of white, black and gold ribbon, the colors of the fraternity.

The hosts of the evening included the active members of the Chi chapter: Charles Romaine, O. J. Parker, Carl Lippold, Fred Moore, Jack Tracer, S. L. Sloan, Harry Williams, Lamar Braswell, Henry Bookout, William Clark, Joe Clark, Bryant Shelton, Elmer Carnes, J. W. Whitaker, Oscar Bergstrom, Alton Trible, Tom Becknell, Marian Pharr, Marvin Smith and Jack Sinclair.

The active members of the Epsilon chapter: Anderson Redding, Cecil Jones, Arthur Sasser, John Goldsmith, Tom Moffett, J. C. Malby, A. J. Alexander, Edward Pope, Burns McCubbin, Malcolm Ryebold, Warner

One Year To Live

BY JOHN HUNTER

He said: "This thing is swift sometimes. Sometimes it is long. But—by you—it is difficult to say—yet, perhaps six months, perhaps a year, perhaps two. A year may be right." She gasped and swayed momentarily, to recover at once.

"You mean—very steadily, with yet a vibrant, panting fear behind the steadiness—that it may be all finished within twelve months—finished for me?"

"At the moment I am afraid so, Elise. Very much afraid so—unless—she tried to smile cheerfully—"unless we can do something. Hope is not always dead, you know. I will prescribe medicine for you, and you will see me again tomorrow, when I may have something else to tell you. Just now I want you to realize the gravity of the situation and be careful. You must not take this pronouncement as definite. But it puts us on our guard. We are warned, and we can act swiftly and surely."

"Yes, doctor, I see." She spoke quietly, not believing in his optimism, and seeing only the dread of what he had told her.

CHAPTER XIII.

It was a difficult thing to understand. Elise had never realized that before, until she stepped from Dr. Lapierre's house into the bright warm sunshine, and walked with the crowds on the pavements.

Death—To die, to leave all this behind—this life, its hopes, its fears, its disappointment, to die—to go over the edge into the unknown. To forget and be forgotten. To die.

She tried to imagine what it must be like. She tried to find comfort in the religious teachings of her convent days and failed; for in her was youth, youth with a hold firm on life, youth to whom life is the alpha and omega of all things; youth to whom death is a cloud no bigger than a man's hand on the far horizon, a thing to pass unnoticed, a thing which might grow and cover all the heavens—one day, but that day a long way off.

A man passed her, an ex-poil, wounded in the war. He dragged himself on one leg, with crutches, and on his lapel was a dab of color, which his country had given him in exchange for his limb.

A day previous Elise would have pitied him. Now she envied him with all her heart and soul and might. Envy him! For though he had lost his leg he had his life. He would live to be old, a lost leg does not kill. He would see summers and winters, sunshine and cloud, the roses and the snowflakes. He would hear the birds and see the hillsides. He would live on till the appointed time, when the world was waiting for him, and he went willingly to that promise which now seemed empty to her.

There might be children about his knee to listen to his tales of how he lost his leg, and men died in filth and muck and slime because a few criminals had spoken in council. His lost leg, instead of being a reproach to all humanity, would be something ennobled and little boys would listen to his tales of how he lost it, and listen again and again, and admire him, so that when their time came they too would go forth bravely, pitiful, sacrifices on the altar of duty.

He would be happy. He probably was happy. For he had life.

She envied him. She dared not hope to be whole and hale and strong. Dared not! But if it had only been a limb she must lose; or an eye, or an ear. Only that! As long as she could live! But all she could do was to go into oblivion! Her soul was sick within her. She cried out against her God!

And Marthe! She remembered Marthe at last, and the memory steadied her tortured thoughts.

Marthe would be left behind. She would lie on that bed in the garret above the Rue Jacques, alone and lonely, with nobody to tell her stories, nobody to comfort her through her sleepless nights of pain; and about her stark want would spread its tattered cloak, as their little savings dwindled and vanished.

If for her it was the end, so surely it would be for Marthe, at the last. Only Marthe would linger and linger and die long afterwards, dreadfully.

That was a thing of which she must think. How Marthe might be saved from the fate which had smitten herself at high noon when the road had seemed clear and safe.

Yet—how could she think? What attention could she give to anything, with the weight of her own fate heavy on her shoulders.

She went back to the room, and Marthe asked her anxiously for the doctor's verdict.

"It is nothing," she said. "Nothing. Only that I am a little run down—the heat—and everything. He will give me medicine."

It reminded her that Marthe must not know, and that she must see Lapierre and warn him against divulging it.

CHAPTER XIV.

The following morning she saw Lapierre again.

At her request he conducted another examination. She thought he seemed taunted, like a bow-string, strained; ready to tremble at the slightest touch, and she conceived that it was because of her condition that he was in this state. She felt grateful to him for his solicitude.

The examination concluded, he repeated his judgment. It would be a year. This thing was not usually found primarily in the lung, but when it was—then there was no hope. She hardly gathered the true nature of the word he used—sarcoma—had no meaning for her, and she was too stricken to inquire.

"It is definite, then, doctor." She was very quiet and steady, although unlike what she had been the previous day.

"Absolutely," he said. "Absolutely. Elise—I am sorry." His tone expressed not so much sympathy, as apology for fault.

She smiled faintly. "You should not be sorry, doctor. It is just my misfortune—mine and Marthe's."

WHY IS IT SO MANY BABIES PICK MAY FOR THEIR BIRTHDAYS?

"Ah—Marthe." He watched her steadily.

She said: "Can nothing be done? Nothing?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "There is the knife. But in the lung, you will find that there is little chance. It might mean death at once instead of later, and the chances of success are so infinitesimal that the risk is not worth while."

"I see. I must face it, then."

"Elise! What are you going to do?"

"The good God alone knows, doctor. I am thinking that Marthe will die when I am gone. You see, when you told me yesterday my first thought was that I was to leave the world, that mine was all the loss. Then I began to realize how selfish that was, and how wrong—and I remembered Marthe. It is Marthe who will suffer when my sufferings are over."

"Perhaps," he was guessing his stethoscope nervously. "There is a way, Elise. I could care for Marthe."

"Doctor!" Her face was alight. She sought for his hand as though to kiss it. "That you should say that! That you should be so noble!"

It was not what he expected, and he checked her speech by drawing his hand from her grasp. He was a little ashamed by the nobility of intention she had credited him with, yet he could not accept it, but must go on, driven by his desire for her.

"It is hardly that, Elise. But—you will remember our talk some time ago; when I said I would care for Marthe? I still want to marry you, Elise."

She was shaken by it. She had thought him generous and wonderful, but now he had destroyed the illusion and the pendulum of her appreciation swung full arc in the other direction. You would not take this broken body of mine for payment? She hardly knew what she said.

"Elise!" He was hoarse with sudden passion. "It is not that. But I love you—love you! Just to hold you—once. To have you with me, even for a year. And I would care for Marthe. She would be always looked after and as happy as it is possible for her to be. Always!"

His eyes dropped a little before her steady gaze. She was more dreadfully cruel than even he had seen her.

"It is payment," she said. "You cannot deny it. You know I cannot live beyond a year, and that afterwards, if I consented, you would have to provide for Marthe all through her life. The result is the same for you, whatever happens. If you are willing to provide for Marthe, why demand from me a sacrifice which you know is abhorrent to you?"

"You refuse then?" He asked the question quickly, his eyes ablaze.

"I refuse," she said, and she was frightened, for she was in no condition to withstand it.

"All right," he put the stethoscope down, and now all the change which had been wrought in him over the past weeks seemed gathered into a great malignancy. You refuse to grant me this, that your sister may be happy. You cannot expect me to worry any more. You will die—and then we shall see."

He turned away, and for a moment she had an almost overwhelming impulse to run to his side and clutch his arm, to tell him not to heed her, that she would do anything to ensure Marthe's future. But something restrained her, and she walked to the door.

It was only when she opened it and went out that he swung round, his right hand flung towards her, as though to hold her back.

"Elise!" She either did not hear him or did not heed him. The door closed on her heavily.

He stood for a space, staring at it blankly, and then, with a curious little sob, dropped to his knees, his lined, startled face upturned to the ceiling, his thin, working lips, pattering prayers. He was like one stricken with madness.

Elise did not go to the dressing room that night. She knew it would probably mean dismissal at the hands of Lolette, but she felt she had no heart to face all the glamor of it, the light talk, the carelessness and the vivid life.

She was trying to fix her own position.

They all wanted payment—all of them, she reflected; Brunel, Mordac, Lapierre—every one. And those who exacted none, like Kendrick, forgot. Even Lolette wanted it—Lolette who was a woman, like herself. Like herself!

She repeated the words, her brain worked subconsciously. Lolette no longer paid. She was past that. She sold—and sold at cent per cent above market value. Lolette was clever. She no longer paid.

But, then, Lolette was surrounded by fools who would pour out their gold for a smile from her heavy-lidded eyes.

Elise got to her feet. She was in the little bedroom, and Marthe was dozing. Almost without thinking she walked across to the mirror and surveyed herself by the light of the candles set on either side of it.

She was beautiful. It needed no egotism for her to acknowledge that. She was beautiful, and hers was the beauty that men admired, for many men had sought her favor. She was beautiful.

She began to tremble slightly, sick at her own thoughts, and turned and looked across at Marthe.

She and Marthe could go out unwept for all the world cared. The men who whispered so sweetly to her would laugh when they heard that she was dead; or, if they cared at all, it would be as they would care for the loss of some valuable merchandise.

She turned again to the mirror. She was beautiful. And she was dying. This beauty of hers was like a warm breath on a mirror's surface—soon to fade and vanish altogether.

And Marthe would want—would want—because there would be no money to help her. She would want—for the price of one of Lolette's gowns, for the price of the jewels Lolette's admirers hung at her feet.

Elise, staring into the glass, saw a vision. It was a room, high and long, with a great glass-topped desk in the center of its floor. Across the desk leaned Brunel, his face alight. She heard his words once more, quietly, temptingly—

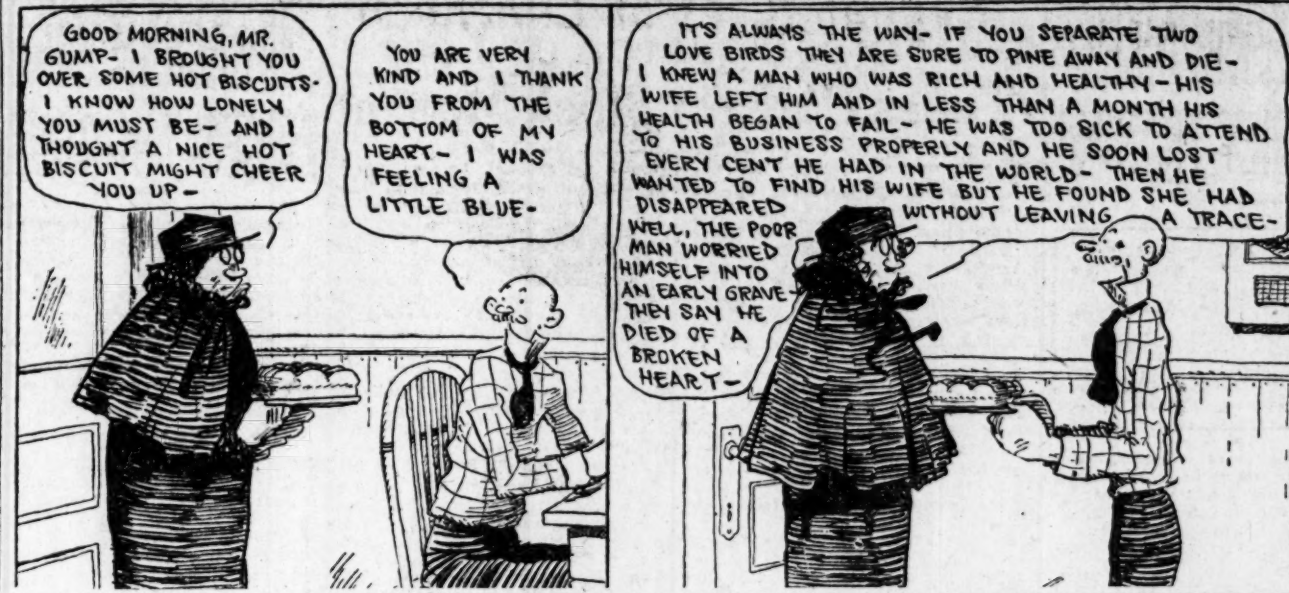

"Riches! Riches! Riches! It need not all be payment!"

CHAPTER XV.

Elise went out for a walk. She suddenly felt that the atmosphere of the garret was stifling and constricted, and had a need for the comparative coolness of the night air outside. She crept across to Marthe's bed, and, assuring herself that Marthe was soundly asleep, she went carefully from the house to the silence of the night-filled streets.

She wanted to think calmly and judicially, and thought she could do so more easily walking about than sitting in the still, close room.

For this was a great decision. She was in the position of one with a certain limited capital to be disposed of to the best advantage. She had a single talent—a year of life—and she must use it with her best endeavors.

Lapierre—Brunel—or what? Already she had definitely decided that continuance at the dressing room was impossible. The stakes were too high to permit of such small play. She must throw a giant hazard with fate and hope to scoop the pool.

As she walked she realized that she had changed even in the past few days. The defection of Kendrick, the attitude of Brunel and Mordac, the sentence of death, and Lapierre's endeavor to take advantage of it, all had reacted swiftly on her mobile temperament. She felt harder, more detached, more calculating, with still, beneath the hardness and detachment, a restless flood of her old emotionism, a protest against this new self which was being born, a reaching out for light and love and the quiet happiness for which nature had fitted her.

The more she thought the more did she concentrate on Brunel and Mordac and their kind. That way lay wealth—wealth, as Brunel had said, beyond her dreams. That way was feverish quiet, forgetfulness, flaunting life, the brimming cup, the bright lights. That way was certain succor for Marthe.

It was the way—the only way. She settled this suddenly and definitely, and with a coolness which astonished her. In fact, she was already beginning to display that aloofness which afterwards served her so well, and which had lain unheeded beneath her girlish simplicity until stark necessity should urge it to active life. It was probably a heritage from those sneering, quizzing, silk clad ancestors of hers who had found life a bore and death a joke.

Brunel was clever. Mordac was devilishly clever. Lolette was, after all, but a fool.

Slowly she was molding her purpose, reviewing the battleground, grouping her forces.

She must remember that all the time—remember the potentialities of these men, and forget Kendrick! God! She must forget Kendrick utterly, or she would sink in the bottomless pool of black despair before her purpose was accomplished.

At the back of her mind she knew what she was going to do. She was going to play her wits against the wits of these men, using her beauty as a pawn in the game; she was going to play them for the highest stakes, and she hoped to hold her line of defense until the hand of death rendered that defense no longer necessary. She went back to the garret.

Marthe was still asleep, and she undressed quietly, very methodical, unobtrusively calm and deliberate, and stood in her white nightgown looking down at her sister.

She was about to drop to her knees when she stayed the movement.

How could she pray? How could she ask the blessing of that God whose hand had stretched out from His heaven and slain her? How dared she talk to that God whose commandments she was breaking?

She crept into bed.

Yet she prayed, hours afterward, when sleep had proved impossible—prayed with wet, hot cheeks and streaming eyes, and the burden of her prayer was appeal for mercy, repeated again and again—appeal and explanation to Him for whom all explanations are unnecessary.

The next morning she went to Brunel.

CHAPTER XVI.

Brunel found her different. Afterwards he persuaded himself that he was mistaken; but during the interview he thought her extremely businesslike and inclined to hardness, a thing which was not at all to his liking.

As usual, he attended his office in the morning, between the hours of 10 and 12, and when her name was sent up to him he told himself that the golden bait had been swallowed at last—hook and line—and that the quivering, frightened fish was landed. Even Brunel had his limitations.

He dismissed the caller who was with him—a well known singer from America—and ordered that Elise should be shown up at once, adding that he interviewed nobody else that day. She came in, ushered with some servility by Brunel's secretary, who conceived that she was going to be a very important personage before Brunel had finished with her. There was a subtle flattery in this servility which Elise appreciated and which pleased her.

To Brunel, when the door was closed and they were alone, she said: "I have decided to dance."

She was dressed more carefully than she had dressed for months, for the battle was joined she was leaving no unit of her forces out of it, and Brunel's eyes ran over her with an admiring appraisal which a week before would have made her shudder but which now left her unmoved.

Brunel found her different. Afterwards he persuaded himself that he was mistaken; but during the interview he thought her extremely businesslike and inclined to hardness, a thing which was not at all to his liking.

As usual, he attended his office in the morning, between the hours of 10 and 12, and when her name was sent up to him he told himself that the golden bait had been swallowed at last—hook and line—and that the quivering, frightened fish was landed. Even Brunel had his limitations.

He dismissed the caller who was with him—a well known singer from America—and ordered that Elise should be shown up at once, adding that he interviewed nobody else that day. She came in, ushered with some servility by Brunel's secretary, who conceived that she was going to be a very important personage before Brunel had finished with her. There was a subtle flattery in this servility which Elise appreciated and which pleased her.

To Brunel, when the door was closed and they were alone, she said: "I have decided to dance."

SOMEBODY'S STENOG—But She Wasn't Dreaming

Constitution's Insurance Policies Are Timely Now

With automobile and pedestrian accidents happening with such frequency that Atlanta police are advocating a reduction in the speed limit rates, can you afford to remain unprotected?

And when you secure protection for yourself and those who are dependent upon you, can you afford to be negligent in seeing that your protection is kept continually in force?

The answer to both these questions is Constitution insurance and a little forethought in seeing that your policy or policies do not lapse and protection cease.

The safety council, the police, city council and civic organizations here are striving to check the accident menace—and all over the country. You will be interested in seeing that both of these great economical protective opportunities.

Keep Your Family Protected.

Remember: You must keep up your payments at all times to be protected. As provided in the policy, as soon as your payments on either The Constitution subscription or the policy itself are allowed to lapse, protection automatically ceases.

A phone call, a visit or a letter to The Constitution insurance department will bring you full details of the two great offers.

Big Poultry Sale.

Silverster, Ga., May 8.—(Special.) The poultry sale held here (Tuesday) the only straight life insurance offer made by an Atlanta newspaper. This policy costs only 15 or 20 cents per week, depending on the risk, in addition to the regular subscription rates of The Daily and Sunday Constitution.

Illustration of Policy.

Here's an illustration of what Constitution insurance will do. W. R. Hayes, of 49 LaFrance street, was injured in an automobile accident at Hunter and Butler streets on February 2, 1924. His car crashed on the street, and while he was crawling out, a street car struck the rear, causing the car to run over Mr. Hayes, knocking out his front teeth and injuring his face and eyes.

He was totally disabled for three weeks, for which he drew $30, the same being paid to him on May 6. These facts are convincing. You will be interested in seeing that both of these great economical protective opportunities.

BIG BOOZE FRAUD LAID TO HAIR TONIC MAKERS

New York, May 8.—A federal grand jury before Judge Goddard today handed up an indictment charging 31 individuals and a corporation with conspiracy to violate the prohibition act and defraud the government out of liquor taxes in transactions in the west and middle west, said to have aggregated more than $500,000.

Assistant Federal Attorney Lemon said the Benthel Manufacturing corporation, mentioned in the indictment, and engaged in making hair tonic, had sold more than $500,000 worth of alcohol to bootleggers in Chicago, Minneapolis and other western and middle western cities since October, 1921.

The indictment was found several days ago, but held under seal until this afternoon. Louis Lurie and Philip Katz, of New York, and Benjamin Miller of Wilkesbarre, Pa., arraigned before Judge Goddard, were held in $10,000 bail each.

The 28 other individual defendants, as yet unnamed, were said to be bootleggers, chemists, warehouse proprietors and employees.

Mr. Lemon said the Benthel corporation, because it was a manufacturer of hair tonic, had a permit to use industrial alcohol but that it had abused its privileges and had sold the alcohol for beverage purposes.

It was a success for merely standpoint, officials reported today. More than 2,000 pounds of poultry were sold. Broilers brought 40 cents, hens 20 to 25 cents and roosters 11 cents a pound.

W. C. Sylvester, the lot went to Swift & Company, at Moultrie, Ga.

Pretty Dancer To Entertain Legionnaires at Luncheon

An interesting feature of the entertainment program of the American Legion luncheon to be held at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Kimball house will be a dance number by Miss Osselle Smith, pupil of Annie Mae Coleman's school of dancing. Music will be furnished by the Fort McPherson orchestra.

Special plans for the state convention to be held in Savannah in June, simultaneously with the reunion of the eighty-second and thirty-first divisions, and meetings of the Reserve Officers' association and the American Legion auxiliaries, will be made this afternoon.

Edgar Dunlap, commander of the American Legion, in Georgia, and Colonel Homer Watkins, of Cedar-town, will be the principal speakers.

21st Commencement Of Atlanta Seminary Was Held Thursday

The 21st commencement exercises of Atlanta seminary were concluded Thursday in Whitcomb hall, morning, graduating addresses were read by A. Constantine Adams, Athens, Ga., whose subject was "Religious Education," Melville C. Mays, Roseland, Va., "Present Day Social Activities," Franklin C. Thompson, Demorest.

The project in Religious Education. The annual meeting of their alumni followed.

The annual address, "As Becometh Saints," was delivered by Rev. W. C. Parker, 14. The elected officers included the following Atlanta names: President, Rev. J. F. Blackburn, '04; secretary and treasurer, Rev. William H. Tillman, '06; member of the executive committee, Rev. W. C. Parker, '14; member of the examining committee, Rev. Starr C. Williams, '14.

The formal graduating exercises occurred in the afternoon. "The Busy Minister and His Commencement Ideals" was given by Professor Franklin C. Thompson, Piedmont college. Solos were sung by Miss Olga Winters and Mrs. G. Floyd Zimmermann, the school's teacher of singing. The degree of Bachelor of Divinity was conferred upon the graduates mentioned, and the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Prof. Ralph Gilliam. The exercises of the week closed with the president's reception.

Wayne B. Wheeler's Salary $660 Month

Washington, May 8.—Evils which they believe would attend the legalization of 24 to 26 percent beer as proposed in a number of pending bills, were described in fulsome testimony today by dry leaders at hearings before the house judiciary committee.

A committee of five from the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, now meeting at Springfield, Mass., Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, and Mrs. Ella A. Roole, representing the Women's Christian Temperance union, joined in an attack on the proposed bills to liberalize the prohibition laws.

While Bishop Thomas Nicholson, of Chicago, president of the Anti-Saloon league and one of the delegation, was on the stand, Representative Pezman, republican, New York, asked whether "the league is engaged in a fight now being made to release William H. Anderson (former New York state superintendent of the league) from prison."

"So far as I know, none is being made," the bishop replied.

Wheeler Tells Salary.

When Representative Perlman next asked what Mr. Wheeler's salary was, the latter volunteered from his place in the committee room that he received $660 a month.

Before the dry advocates opened their attack on the proposed legislation, Francis C. Harley, chairman of the National Liberal alliance, concluded the argument for modification. He told the committee he spoke for seven million people who had voted through a referendum of his organization.

Mr. Harley, who is a former mayor of Astoria, Oregon, later was the target of an attack by Dr. Clarence True Wilson, another of the Methodist conference delegation, who characterized Harley's regime at Astoria as "a combination of Sodom, Gomorrah and Perdition."

Asserting that prohibition had "wrought marvels in the United States," Dr. Wilson declared it had made the "gigantic liquor trust" more powerful than the state and the church, an outlaw in four years.

"If you allow liquor with a kick in it," he said, "you open brevieries and defeat the purpose of the eighteenth amendment. The one-half of one percent standard was first set by the liquor traffic, which wallowed in protection under license against all illicit sellers."

Bishop Adna W. Leonard, of California, another member of the Methodist delegation, declared that efforts to change the enforcement law in California were "not meeting with success."

MISS OSSIELE SMITH.

BARNES REELECTED AS CHAMBER HEAD

Cleveland, Ohio, May 8.—The chamber of commerce of the United States, in the final session of its twelfth annual convention here today, pledged the wholehearted support of organized business to efforts to bring about through friendly negotiations "the most amicable understanding" with Japan on the question of immigration.

President Julius H. Barnes, Duluth, Minn., grain merchant, and wartime director of the United States grain corporation, was selected for the third time to head the chamber.

O. M. Clark, Portland, Oregon, was one of those elected to the directorate.

The convention expressed "accord with the underlying sentiments and essential principles" of the experts' report on reparations; urged American support of the international court of justice through senatorial consent "to the proposal which has been made by the executive"; and prompt ratification by the United States of the treaty of Louisiana.

Indorsement was given a constitutional amendment to permit federal highway appropriations for new construction on trans-continental routes through semi-desert regions of the public domain in the western states; economy in government; enactment of legislation for the encouragement of aeronautics; peace time industrial mobilization for war, and the principle of workmen's compensation insurance. The proposal to alter the power of the federal supreme court to declare legislation unconstitutional was condemned.

Lewis E. Pierson, New York, and John W. O'Leary, Chicago, were newly-elected vice presidents. Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago, packer, was named with Charles F. Weed, of Boston, an honorary vice president. All other officers were re-elected.

Seventeen directors nominated by balloting Monday were elected today, with the exception of Frederick J. Haynes, Detroit, whose name was withdrawn in favor of R. T. Moore, of Shreveport, a senior member of the chamber.

JACKSONVILLIAN HELD UPON ASSAULT CHARGE

Jacksonville, Fla., May 8.—Isaac Williams, of Jacksonville, was arrested this afternoon on charge of assault with intent to kill Edward Crews, by Justice of the Peace James Gavan, of Mayport. It was announced by local police. Mrs. Crews, wife of the wounded man, applied to Judge Gavan for the warrant for Williams' arrest. Williams appeared in court and was released on a temporary bond. Crews is in a serious condition in the county hospital, suffering from a gunshot wound in the right hip.

PLEAS FOR WOMEN AS PASTORS MADE TO METHODISTS

Springfield, Mass., May 8.—Impassioned pleas for the full admission of women to the pastorate of the Methodist Episcopal church were made at the general conference today. After long discussion, it was voted to let the matter go over till tomorrow, when it will be made an order of the day.

Arguments presented for the commission's report were that marriage and motherhood would interfere with the proper performance of pastoral duties, that the church as a whole was indifferent to the matter at issue, that the experiment of women pastors in other churches has had as yet but fragmentary results, and that "embarrassing" situations would be created by full indorsement.

Those who supported the amendment, finally laid out the table, said that women had earned an equal place with men in every department of activity, and that the church should join other professions in giving women equality.

$33,000 OIL FUND SOUGHT BY MAYFIELD

Washington, May 8.—Opening of investigations into the election of Senator Mayfield, of Texas, Thursday, brought a charge that the senator had tried to raise $33,000 from oil operators to finance his campaign for the senate.

It was made before the special senate subcommittee by Mike McNamara, former employee of the public utilities commission, of which Mayfield was chairman. McNamara said he was called into Mayfield's office before the candidacy had been announced.

"He told me he was going to run for the United States senate and that it would cost a lot of money," the witness said. "As supervisor of the oil section of the commission, he said he thought I should have some influence with the oil men and could make them 'kick in.'"

He apportioned the proposed sum, $33,000, among various prominent operators. W. B. Hamilton, of the Texas Home company, the Texas company, and various others he said, should "come through" with $5,000 each.

The witness said he eventually sent $200 in Graham, Texas, and sent it to Senator Mayfield. This was contributed by a Mr. Morrison, he testified. McNamara stated the money was sent in June, 1922, by registered mail, and that he received a return slip, notifying him that the letter had been received.

In the following October, witness said, Mayfield asked him to swear out a false deposition.

"I refused to say I had received the money on my responsibility and had never sent it to him," McNamara declared. "I refused, telling him that I couldn't tell anything but the truth."

Counsel for Mayfield attempted to show McNamara was unfriendly to Mayfield.

At beginning of the hearing Thursday, counsel for Mayfield asked dismissal of the investigation on the ground that George E. B. Paddy, who is contesting the election, is now a government employee. W. F. Zimmermann, chief counsel, said Paddy is now assistant district attorney at Houston, Texas. His motion was held up by the committee until he can submit a brief of his contentions.

HARE CROSS-EXAMINED IN TRIAL OF PHILLIPS

Washington, May 8.—Cross examination of Major Charles W. Hare, former director of sales of the war department, was continued today in the trial of John L. Phillips, of Georgia, and five others charged with conspiracy to defraud the government through the sale of surplus lumber from army cantonments.

Replying to Frank J. Hogan, of counsel for Ernest C. Morse, who succeeded Major Hare as director of sales, the witness declared that Morse "had nothing to do with the fixing of the prices for the lumber" nor with the carrying out of the contract.

Major Hare said Mr. Morse rendered "valuable service" to the government and bore an "excellent reputation."

Counsel for the other defendants subjected the witness to a searching cross-examination.

Colonel Peter Junkersfeld, of White Plains, N. Y., former army construction division official, was called to the stand and when Assistant Attorney General George W. P. Moore brought out in his testimony that Morse had recommended appointment of George M. Chambers as inspector of government surplus lumber, counsel for Moore objected.

Colonel Junkersfeld said he had signed a letter recommending appointment of Chambers as chair of the committee on the subject of surplus lumber, but apparently had been lost. Attorney Parker sought to show the memorandum was in the handwriting of Morse, but on objection by Moore, counsel Justice Bailey deferred reception of the testimony pending further proof of the loss of the original memorandum.

Mr. Chambers died after the indictments were returned.

CONNECTICUT VOTES TO BE UNINSTRUCTED

New Haven, Conn., May 8.—The effort of Delegate P. Fitch to secure adoption of a resolution instructing the 20 national convention delegates named by the democratic state convention here today for Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, failed just before adjournment. A substitute resolution permitting the delegates to vote as their judgment dictates "for the best interests of the democratic party" was adopted amid cheers.

It is Commissioner Perry's opinion that it will be but a short time before the interstate commerce commission will concur in Mr. Keeler's report and thus eliminate this surcharge. Railroads received from this source, Mr. Perry stated, $22,801,124 in 1922, and $27,480,863 in 1923.

Decision in 10 Days.

Attorneys for the Pullman company objected to the present method of collecting the surcharge, claiming that it is now virtually an increased Pullman rate, in which the Pullman company does not participate. If the amount is collected, the company claimed, it should be collected by the railroads as additional fare.

The roads submitted figures intended to show that the average occupancy of Pullman cars is much lower than coaches, and would not be materially increased if the surcharge were removed.

The case will be decided by the commission in ten days.

WILL ASK ELIMINATION.

Commissioner James A. Perry, of the Georgia public service commission, Thursday stated that a recommendation will be made today to the interstate commerce commission by Examiner Keeler, advocating elimination of surcharge on Pullman and chair cars.

Mr. Perry says that in 1921 the Georgia commission eliminated this surcharge in Georgia for about a year, with a saving in the state of approximately $150,000. This, he says, was absorbed by the interstate commerce commission on August 19, 1922.

It is Commissioner Perry's opinion that it will be but a short time before the interstate commerce commission will concur in Mr. Keeler's report and thus eliminate this surcharge. Railroads received from this source, Mr. Perry stated, $22,801,124 in 1922, and $27,480,863 in 1923.

Defender of Cameron Dam Bows To Hand of Death

Milwaukee, Wis., May 8.—John Dietz, 63 years old, famous in Wisconsin as the "defender of Cameron Dam," died in a local hospital here today after a long illness.

His family, consisting of his wife, three sons, Clarence, Leslie and John, and two daughters, Helen and Mrs. Myra Newman, were at the bedside when Dietz passed.

Dietz, who had been irrational for several days and for whom a guardian was appointed on Tuesday, lapsed into unconsciousness at noon. He never came out of it, and passed away peacefully.

The life story of John Dietz is both dramatic and tragic. One of the earliest settlers in the cut-over regions of the north, Dietz, with his family, located on a farm in Barron county and then moved farther north to Sawyer county, where, beside the Thorp river, and Cameron Dam, he staked his all to make a farm home for himself and his wife and children.

It was in this little break in the clearing Dietz came into conflict with the Chippewa Log and Boom company. Dietz had land beside the river and below the dam. This he cultivated. About the time his crops were in the ground the time came for floating the logs down the river and the opening of the dam resulted in the flooding of part of Dietz's farm.

There were meetings and conferences between Dietz and the lumber company, but they could not agree on a settlement and Dietz became a law unto himself. Then started the six-year battle—a bloody battle—which finally ended when Dietz, surrounded by a posse, surrendered after he had practically exhausted his supply of ammunition and after his home had been riddled with bullets. Oscar Harp, deputy sheriff, was shot to death in the battle.

Dietz was tried for murder and found guilty. He was sentenced to serve the balance of his life in the state penitentiary but he served only ten years. He was liberated in May, 1921, on a pardon granted by Governor John J. Hoffman.

Dietz returned to his family, living here, but it was not long before he became estranged from them and in the summer of last year he came to Milwaukee.

EXPERTS TO TALK ON TUBERCULOSIS

The chief social event of the week's convention of the National Tuberculosis association will be a reception, dinner and dance to all the delegates, Friday night, at the Atlanta Woman's Club, 946 Peachtree street. This will follow the final session of the National Conference of Tuberculosis Secretaries, at which reports will be received from sub-committees on the seal and modern health crusade, and the election of members of the executive committee.

Presentation of papers on important subjects connected with tuberculosis work will be continued this morning at the Tabernacle at 9:30 o'clock. Among the speakers and topics for the day will be: Dr. Linsly R. Williams, managing director, "Looking Ahead in Health Education"; Dr. Nathaniel T. Emmett,

"The Educational Value of Medical School Inspection"; Dr. Mary Evelyn Brydon, "Training Rural Teachers in Health Education"; Dr. Charles H. Keene, "What Can Be Done in Health Education in the Public Schools"; and Professor Clark W. Hetherington, "Relationship of Physical Education to Health and Recreation."

The nursing section will meet at 2 o'clock today to discuss various phases of their problems in the finding of cases and gathering statistics, with Mattie E. Coleman, of Nashville, Tenn., and Emma Duke, of Athens, Ga., as the principal speakers.

Go To Stone Mountain. Delegates were entertained Thursday afternoon on a trip to Stone Mountain by the local tuberculosis committee, with 700 partaking of an old-fashioned barbecue. The automobiles for the trip were supplied by the Atlanta Woman's club and the Inter-Civic clubs, and the visitors were given an opportunity to view the memorial to the Confederacy and heard by Dave Webb an explanation and description of the origin and development of the idea for this month's hostelry.

On returning to the city, delegates listened to technical papers on laryngeal tuberculosis presented by Dr. Aletius M. Forster and Dr. S. J. Chapman. The results of a period of careful observation of the benefits derived in the treatment of tuberculosis by exposure to the sun's rays were presented by Dr. Horace Lo Grasso and Dr. Frank Baldery, showing that the greatest value, patients showing a marked improvement in general physical condition, in addition to lessening the activity of the disease, it changes the mental attitude of the patient, making his treatment and cure a pleasure rather than a painful necessity.

Tribute Paid Dr. Pryor. Tribute was paid Dr. John H. Pryor, late Buffalo physician, when all business Thursday night was halted for one minute. Dr. Pryor, who was head of the Buffalo tuberculosis hospital, and who was responsible for the sun treatment, died since the last annual meeting of the association.

The convention will conclude Saturday morning with papers on child health education and technical medical surgical research reports, by experts affiliated with the association.

ATLANTA YOUTH HELD ON BURGLARY CHARGE

Birmingham, Ala., May 8.—Fred Brewer, giving his home as Atlanta, is in jail here charged with burglary and grand larceny following his arrest last night at the residence of J. W. Johnson. Brewer was held at bay by Hugh Going and Norman Diggreen, 15-year-old boys, until officers arrived. He is reported to have picked a lock in the back door. Jewelry valued at nearly $700 was found in Brewer's possession when taken to police headquarters. A report is being made by police to find a young man alleged to be Brewer's associate here.

BAG WITH $35,000 IN JEWELS MISSING

Baltimore, Md., May 8.—Police in four cities have been asked to search for a traveling bag containing $35,000 worth of jewelry which E. J. Bevin, New York jeweler, today reported had disappeared from a Baltimore and Ohio train between New York and Baltimore.

The bag was found to be missing from his train, Bevin said, just as he was about to leave the train early this morning. A search of the berth and the vicinity failed to produce it. The train continued to Cincinnati. Police there are in Washington and New York were notified.

Thursday night's attendance at the big Elks' circus was one of the largest that ever assembled in the city auditorium, officials declared, and although no official count had been made at a late hour, it was estimated that the crowd had exceeded 10,000.

With only Friday and Saturday night shows left before the end of the circus, interest continues to mount and officials said, and tremendous crowds are expected the remaining two nights.

Funds secured this week above actual expenses of the circus will be used in defraying the expenses of Elks' patrol and famous band to Boston, early in the summer, to compete with other lodges throughout the nation at the national convention.

LINE ON LAKES BREAKS ICE JAM AND MAKES PORT

Duluth, Minn., May 8.—The steamer Huronic, a Canadian passenger liner with 65 persons, including passengers and crew aboard, tonight broke the ice jam at the head of the lakes which had held her fast since Monday night and steamed into port.

PROMISE FARM HEARING Consideration Given Relief Bills Before Adjournment.

Washington, May 8.—Formal assurance was given tonight in the senate by administration leaders that opportunity would be given for adequate consideration of "some farm relief measure" before congress adjourns.

The decision of a republican party conference that a farm relief measure would be taken up immediately after the revenue bill, Senator Wagon, republican, Indiana, said had not been altered.

Senator Smoot, Utah, one of the republican spokesmen, whose views were sought during a discussion of the subject, declared, however, he saw little indication that the session would be concluded "about the first of June," a date declared by several senators to have been agreed upon.

ARNSTEIN SURRENDERS AND IS GIVEN 2 YEARS

Washington, May 8.—Jules (Nicky) Arnstein and Isidore Cohn surrendered themselves in District of Columbia superior court today and were committed to federal prison for two years.

The two men were convicted of bringing stolen bonds into Washington from New York. Arnstein's attorney informed the court that his client was ill and asked that he be sent to the Atlanta penitentiary in Leavenworth, but the court advised that the request would have to be directed to the department of justice.

BAND CONTESTS END MUSIC WEEK PROGRAM

Georgia prep school bands will engage in a contest this afternoon and tonight as a feature of the Friday program of the "National Music Week" celebration. Seven bands will compete in a parade in the afternoon, and will take part in a competitive concert at Wesley Memorial church at night.

Judges of musical ability are: Lieutenant Galyean, of the Rotary Boys' band; Clint E. Barber, conductor of the City Park Concert band; Paul Donohoe, cornet; Frank Kempton, head of the American Legion band; Ted Smith, director of the Wesley Memorial band; Enrico Leide, director of the Metropolitan theater orchestra, and Mike Greenblatt, conductor of the Elks' Royal Purple band.

Judges of Appearance. The following will act as judges of appearance: Captain Joe Cook, commander Elks' patrol; Dr. E. Van de Vere, commander Shrine patrol; Captain Ennis, of the state military equipment; and Captain J. W. Maddox, of the American Legion.

The parade, composed of bands from Tech High school, Georgia Military academy, Marietta college, Lanier High school, of Macon; Monroe A. and M. Riverside Military academy, of Gainesville, and Locust Grove institute, will form on West Baker street at 3 o'clock this afternoon, marching down Peachtree past the judges' stand, which will be at Shrine headquarters, 190 Peachtree street.

At 3 o'clock tonight the parade will play in the competitive concert at Wesley Memorial church. Each band will play a march and an optional selection. Judges will be the same in both contests.

Program of Music.

The following program, arranged by the Morgan-Stephens conservatory of music, will be given between regular numbers of the concert: Violin duet by Allen Stephens and Julius Bach; with J. E. Bach at the piano, playing "Bach-Gounod"; piano solo, "Warrior's song" by Miss Pearl Proger; violin solo by Julius Bach, accompanied by J. E. Bach on the piano; piano solo, Mendelssohn's "Agitation" by Miss Allen Stephens.

A silver loving cup will be given the hand winning first place in each contest, and the instrument will be the second prize in each contest, while the third prize winner in the parade will receive a drum major's baton, and winner of third prize in the concert a bass drum.

REVENUE BILL VOTE IS POSSIBLE TODAY

Washington, May 8.—The senate made such progress with consideration of the revenue bill at a session which lasted throughout the day and until late tonight that the prospect of a vote on final passage tomorrow was considered favorable by all concerned.

All finance committee amendments were disposed of during the day, and thereafter individual amendments were taken up, the senate adding a number to the revenue bill and striking others. One of the last actions before a recess was taken was the adoption, 55 to 28, of a proposal by Senator Jones, democrat, New Mexico, to open all the hearings on the proposed board of tax appeals to the public.

Two attempts to get an agreement whereby debate would be limited to two hours after 2 o'clock and entirely prohibited after 5 o'clock failed on objections from both sides.

Senator Norbeck, republican, South Dakota, gave notice he would propose the McNary-Haugen farm bill as an amendment and Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, declared he would offer his farm measure as a substitute then to the McNary-Haugen bill.

DAUGHTER-IN-LAW OF GEN. LEE BURIED

Lexington, Va., May 8.—Following simple services in the Robert E. Lee Memorial Episcopal church, the body of Mrs. Mary Tabb Bolling Lee, widow of General W. P. E. Lee and daughter-in-law of Robert E. Lee, was placed in the family vault in the Washington memorial chapel on the Washington and Lee campus here this morning. Exercises at the university were suspended during the funeral which was held at 10 o'clock.

A student body joined with townspeople in the simple commitment services.

$300,000 FIRE SWEEPS SMALL ALABAMA TOWN

Selma, Ala., May 8.—A disastrous fire at Jackson, Ala., which destroyed the Cut Rate dry goods store, the South Alabama Mercantile company, the Clarke County Mercantile company and the Andrews Hardware company, four of the biggest concerns in that town, occurred about midnight Wednesday night, according to reports received here today. The loss is said to amount to about 300,000. There was very little insurance.

YOUTH ARRESTED WHILE RETURNING STOLEN MACHINE

As he was on his way to return an automobile stolen Sunday afternoon from the Fluke Tire & Rubber company, 260 Ivy street, Frank Boyd, 17, of 223 South Pryor street, Thursday night was arrested by Detective J. W. Woolley after a long chase.

The youth admitted theft of the car, Woolley stated, but said that he had only borrowed it, and was returning it when captured. According to the story he told police, he took the machine from in front of the Fluke company's shop and almost immediately encountered some of the trials and tribulations which are the lot of the amateur driver. In fact, less than three hours after he took the machine, he was arrested by Deatur police on a charge of speeding and was released only after paying a fine.

He had used the car considerably since then, police quote him as saying. "Although I had a good time, this will be my last offense as well as my first offense."

OIL PROBES HOLD TECHNICAL SESSION

Washington, May 8.—In a committee room destitute of spectators, the practical details of oil production on Teapot Dome and Elk Hill were described today for the senate oil committee by H. Foster Bain, director of the bureau of mines.

In recent weeks, the crowds that once packed the hearing room have dwindled to a few spectators. The first time the committee began its public session with no one present except members, witnesses and newspaper men. It was the first meeting in a week.

In order to show that there was oil in Teapot Dome below the second well creek sand, Senator Walsh, the committee prosecutor, asked Director Bain about the drilling of a well to the third well creek sand. The witness said the well was producing about 80 barrels a day.

Seven or eight wells have been drilled under the Doherty lease on the Elk Hill reserve, the director said, and have produced about 1,500,000 barrels. Most of them, he told the committee, were offset wells. The actual average royalty paid by Doherty was 28 per cent in December, the witness testified, and is now 26 per cent. The new drilling under the Doherty lease since the senate investigation began.

MAN WITH THREE NOTCHES ON GUN SHOT IN CHICAGO

Chicago, May 8.—Joe Howard, alleged beer runner, who is said to have boasted of three notches on his gun, was shot to death tonight by two men who stepped through the door of a saloon here and sent a shower of bullets into his face and chest.

"Another beer feud," was the comment of the first policeman to take the slain man to the morgue.

Police are searching for Albert Capone, owner of the notorious "Four Deuces" dive, in connection with Howard's death.

COOLIDGE MAJORITY RUNS OVER 50,000

San Francisco, Cal., May 8.—An additional 87 precincts reported late today in Tuesday's presidential primary election, which accounts for all except 405 of the state's 6,374 precincts. The new precincts reduced slightly the lead of the Coolidge delegation over the Johnson delegation.

The new precincts reduced slightly the lead of the Coolidge delegation over the Johnson delegation. The actual average royalty paid by Doherty was 28 per cent in December, the witness testified, and is now 26 per cent. The new drilling under the Doherty lease since the senate investigation began.

VALUE OF COOPERATIVE ADVERTISING STRESSED

Speaking to the Atlanta Ad Men's club at luncheon Thursday, Dr. H. F. Vermillion, of El Paso, Texas, told members it was impossible for any man to advertise alone.

Dr. Vermillion urged upon the local ad men the need for cooperative advertising for the benefit of the community and said such work could be made to yield large dividends in better health, better morals and better living conditions generally.

Bert Niehoff, manager of the Atlanta baseball team, spoke briefly. He assured the advertising men that the Crackers would be fighting hard for every game on the schedule, but said it was too early in the season to predict where they would finish in the team standings.

Miss Betty Ennis, dancer, was the feature entertainer at the luncheon. Kay Binford, solo banjoist, was also on the program, while Manny Strand played the accompaniments for Miss Ennis' dances.

A resolution was passed instructing the president to have a letter of sympathy prepared and sent to the family of Clarence Blosser, who died Wednesday at Bldg. Miss. Mr. Blosser, president and founder of the Blosser company, was a member of the club.
